

ROOSEVELT THROWS WEIGHT BEHIND CAMP IN PRELUDE TO BARNESVILLE TALK TODAY

DS, JAPS REACH TRUCE IN FIGHTING ON KOREAN FRONT

Agreement Provides for Fixed Commission to Deal With Redemarcation of Disputed Line.

ATTLE HAS RAGED SINCE 29TH OF JULY

Troops Will Remain in Present Positions Pending a Settlement.

MOSCOW, Aug. 11.—(Thursday)—(AP)—Tass, official Soviet agency, said today an agreement had been reached to end fighting on the Siberian-Man-chukuo border at noon today.
The fighting time (10 p. m. Atlanta time, Wednesday).

The agency said the agreement officially announced by the Soviet foreign office.
The announcement said the agreement reached by the Japanese ambassador, Mamoru Shige-tsugu, and the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, Maxim Litvin-off, provided Japanese and Soviet troops should retain their positions held when fighting ceases.

Mixed Commission.
A mixed commission of two Soviet representatives, and two Japanese-Manchukuo representatives will deal with redemarcation of the disputed frontier.
The Soviet troops occupied the heights of Changkufeng, near Koryu, July 11, claiming the ground part of Siberia under the Hunan treaty of 1886 with China.
An official communique declared the armistice proposals made by Litvinoff, who also suggested the border commission include the representative of a third power as an arbiter.

Litvinoff, however, did not insist upon the appointment of an arbitrator when Shigemitsu refused to consider it.
When Litvinoff proposed that the commission use the agreement, with maps attached, of the border between Russia and China, Shigemitsu suggested the commission's work be based on some other materials of which the Soviet government said it had no knowledge.

The ambassador promised, however, to get in touch with his government and give an answer on point.

Vest Pocket War.
Thus the worst of the long series of border incidents which led into a vest pocket war appeared to be liquidated.
Foreign observers in Moscow pointed out, however, the agreement cannot yet be taken as a definite end of the incident, as there always is danger the leaders of the Kwantung army (Japan's army of occupation in Manchouria) may not abide by the decision to cease hostilities.

Bombing planes, artillery, infantry and tanks have been brought into play on an increasing scale since July 29 when, according to Japanese war office communications, Japanese launched a counter-attack upon Russians who were

Big Nazi Plane Is Groomed For U. S. Hop

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Germany's huge Focke-Wulf land plane "Brandenburg" was being groomed tonight for a non-stop flight to New York, probably tomorrow.

The big "Condor" type plane, 78 feet long and with a wingspread of 108 feet, will take off at 8 p. m., tomorrow (2 p. m., Atlanta time), provided weather reports are "not too bad."

In command will be Captain Alfred Henke, crack flyer of the Lufthansa airline and veteran of many south Atlantic flights in Dornier-Wal flying boats, who brought the four-motored "Brandenburg" from Bremen today.
Captain Henke expects to reach
New York in 21 or 22 hours, which would be 11 a. m. or noon, Atlanta time, Friday, if the takeoff is made at schedule.

Broke, WPA Clerk Lists Liabilities of $628,892

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A $100 a month WPA clerk filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy today, listing his cash assets at one dollar and his liabilities at $628,892.

W. Merle Fisher, once a wealthy banker, said he incurred the indebtedness while he was employed as an officer in a chain of banks operated by his father-in-law, John Bain. The Bain banks collapsed in 1931, owing de-positors $13,000,000.

Fisher, now 45 years old, scheduled his assets as a $75,000 insurance policy assigned as collateral on notes, $3,213.17 in stocks, household furnishings and real estate. Of his liabilities, he said, $33,314.46 represented defaulted notes he had signed for friends.

Many Dead, Injured In Ecuador's 'Quakes'

QUITO, Ecuador, Aug. 10.—(AP)
A series of earthquakes today destroyed three towns, causing undetermined deaths and injuries, and damaged buildings in Quito, the capital, and Guayaquil, the country's main port and largest city.

The small towns of Sangolqui, Eltingo Andalagas were destroyed. In Alangas, 35 shocks were felt in 24 hours, leveling the town and causing several deaths and many injuries.

The minister of war rushed troops to the stricken areas with tents, medical supplies and other first-aid equipment.

Frankenstein Garage Is Damaged by Bomb

DETROIT, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A bomb damaged the garage behind the residence of Richard T. Frankenstein, deposed as vice president of the United Automobile Workers of America, tonight. The garage was empty.

Frankenstein, his wife and their three children were in the house, which was not damaged, along with Maurice Sugar, his attorney, and a stenographer.

"I believe the bomb was an attempt to intimidate me," said Frankenstein. Police ordered a 24-hour guard posted.

New Orleans Is Western Outpost To Youth Who Seeks Adventure

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—(AP)
John Lynch, 19, really thought
New Orleans was the last outpost of civilization—to use the words of Police Captain Edward Smith.
John was found on the street here today by two city detectives, headed for the west. John, son of a veterinarian of Union, N. J., shipped to Tampa, hiked to New Orleans, stayed a week here and decided to go exploring.
Yesterday, John said, he went into a Canal street store to buy some things he needed.
He said the proprietor pointed to a bear skin and some wolf skins on display in the store and told him he would need guns for pro-

Rivers, President and Camp 'Talk It Over' at Warm Springs Luncheon

Governor Rivers (left), President Roosevelt and United States Senator Camp seated in the luncheon hall at Warm Springs yesterday, in which the President gave his blessings to Camp's candidacy for Georgia's nomination as the United States senator. REGENTS APPROVE BUILDING PLANS

14 Georgia Institutions to Benefit From Construction Costing $2,234,913.

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 10.—(AP)—
The state board of regents tonight approved a sweeping expansion of its already extensive building program, calling for additional construction to cost $2,234,913 for structures at 14 of the 20 units of the University System of Georgia.

At a meeting here on the eve of their appearance with President Roosevelt tomorrow, when he receives an honorary degree from the University of Georgia, the regents authorized lease conveyance to the federal government of portions of the campuses of units where the new buildings are to be constructed.

Applications for money to finance the program through the campus lease plan has been made with the regional office of the Public Works Administration.
Chancellor S. V. Sanford disclosed.
President M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech, spoke to the board and it commended him for "splendid operation" of the institution at Atlanta.

The board also approved investment of trust funds at Tech for a $350,000 building program including two dormitories, a chemistry annex and a research building. Application for PWA assistance was authorized.

The new expansion program calls for the following buildings:
Two dormitories at North Georgia College, Dahlonega; one dormitory at West Georgia College, Carrollton; one dormitory at Ab-

DEFEAT OF POPE JOLTS NEW DEAL

Loss of F. D. R. Supporters Stings Despite Caraway, Bulkley Successes.

By the Associated Press.

Senator James P. Pope, ardent administration supporter, conceded defeat yesterday in the Idaho Democratic primary in which the "New Deal" was made the principal issue.

Behind 37,189 to 40,729 when 664 of Idaho's 802 precincts had been tabulated, Pope wired his congratulations to Representative D. Worth Clark, occasional opponent of Roosevelt policies who campaigns as a conservative Democrat and no administration
"yes man."

It was the first defeat for an administration senator in a primary where the New Deal issue was clearly drawn.

Other late returns from Tuesday's primaries served to increase the leads of Senators Robert J.
Bulkley and Hattie W. Caraway in Ohio and Arkansas. Both are administration supporters.

Virtually complete returns in Ohio gave Bulkley 523,715 votes to 199,716 for former Governor
George White. Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati lawyer and son of former President William Howard Taft, won the Republican nomination over Judge Arthur Day. The vote, virtually complete, was Taft, 320,760; Day, 248,201.

Mrs. Caraway held a 4,612 vote lead over Representative John L.
McClellan in the returns from 1,828 of Arkansas' 2,002 precincts.
The count was 118,574 to 114,962.

In the Ohio contest for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, Charles Sawyer, running on a "reform" platform with the backing of the CIO, won over Governor Martin L. Davey, seeking re-election.

Monroe Recalled by Athens, Gaily Dressed for President

Roosevelt Will Be Second To View Cultured and Historic City.

By RALPH MCGILL.
ATHENS, Aug. 10.—In 1819, President James Monroe spent a night in Athens and then splashed his team on over the muddy roads to the estate of William H. Crawford, his secretary of the treasury.
He returned with the sketch of the Monroe Doctrine.

Tomorrow morning Franklin D.
Roosevelt, the first inaugurated President to visit Athens since the visit of Monroe in the early days of the republic, will arrive at Athens on a special train to receive an honorary degree from the University at the university's 135th commencement exercises.

The first chartered state university in America held its first commencement exercises in 1804 with the class seated on slabs of wood and with guards posted to prevent a surprise by the hostile Cherokees across the Oconee river.

Tomorrow morning the commencement will be held in the football stadium. A platform has been built for the President, the class, the university officers and faculty, the Governor and the board of regents. There are 2,000 seats on the speakers' stand. It faces, as do the loud-speakers, the north stand which seats 18,000 persons.

The President's special train will arrive shortly after 9 o'clock.
The streets are decorated. The campus is not. This was not expected to be decorated as the atmosphere is an academic one and has no political aspect, the President having announced he would not prostitute the occasion with mention of politics.

The procession will move through streets which will be roped off. It will climb up College Hill, the one which returning students and football crowds know so well, remembering its rough cobblestones. The procession will pass down Herty drive, named for the late Georgia scientist who invented a method of making newsprint and paper from slash pine.

The long, presidential car seats nine people. In it are expected to be, with the President, Governor Rivers, Chancellor S. V. Sanford, President Harmon V. Caldwell, Mayor A. G. Dudley and possibly others.

The board of regents will await the President on the platform and greet him there. Secret service officials requested few cars in procession.

'Hopes' Candidate Will Be Senator; Rivers Is Present

Indorsement of the New Deal Aspirant Ahead of 'Schedule' Is Surprise to Political Observers.

TWO COURSES OPEN IN LAMAR SPEECH

George Refuses Comment on Declaration; McRae Asserts 'I Hope Not.'

By L. A. FARRELL.
President Roosevelt's startling indorsement yesterday of the senatorial candidacy of United States Attorney Lawrence Camp, a day ahead of "schedule," literally stunned the state.

Although his unqualified statement at Warm Springs informed the people of his choice in the four-cornered battle for Senatorial F. George's seat, it left much open to speculation for thousands who will pour into Barnesville today to hear the chief executive's address dedicating the Lamar

REA project.

Political observers felt that there were two courses open to the President.
He could turn the Barnesville address into a campaign speech for District Attorney Camp or he might confine his remarks to the objectives of the New Deal and to his views on what some of his advisers consider the "Nation's No. 1 Economic Problem."

Likewise, two reasons were advanced for the manner and method chosen for the Camp indorsement.
The first was that the President wanted
Governor Rivers far out in front in any picture related to the indorsement.

George Presence.
The other was that he did not wish to "crack down" on Senator George in the senior senator's presence, George, although he will be present at Barnesville, has no speaking place on the program and could do nothing but "take it" if the President elects to "shoot the works" in his presence.

It has been known for some time that the New Deal organization in Washington and in Georgia has been striving to get Governor Rivers and his organization definitely behind Camp. Some New Dealers have made no effort to identify, was seriously wounded when he attempted to leap from the car.

A woman, 25, a girl about 13, and a boy about 10 were lodged in jail at Savannah. Sullivan said they refused to disclose their identity or that of the men.
Fingerprints of the men and woman were submitted to the Federal Bureau of Identification,
Sullivan said, for checkup.
Sullivan said he was informed the troopers found several pistols, a quantity of ammunition, and a set of Virginia license plates in the car. He added the woman was armed with a .38-caliber revolver.

One Slain, State Trooper Wounded In South Georgia Roadside Shooting

WAYS STATION, Ga., Aug. 10.— (AP)—An unidentified man was slain and two others, including a state highway patrolman, were wounded tonight when troopers halted a car containing two men, a woman and two children.
At state patrol headquarters in Atlanta, Lon E. Sullivan, director of safety education, said the shooting occurred when Patrolmen J.
E. Luckie and J. R. Cook pursued and halted a car which carried two men under suspicion.

The driver, who was not identified, was slain when he drew a gun and fired on Patrolman Luckie, wounding him in the leg.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 10.—(P)—Ten-year-old Paul Varga was killed today in a make-believe duel at Szombathely, near the Austrian border.

He was struck by a bullet from a duelling pistol in the hands of a 9-year-old companion. The boys had pretended they were angry and playfully decided to settle their difference in the best Hungarian tradition on the field of honor.

They found pistols in their homes. The sound of shots from a locked room brought members of their families who found Paul dying.

ROOSEVELT FROWN NOW FACING TEST

Approval of Camp Is Held First Move in Offensive Strategy.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(P)—The Roosevelt smile of approval for favored senators has seemingly exerted strong influence on many Democratic party voters in this campaign, and now the effectiveness of his frown is to be tested.

At Warm Springs today he struck out against a Democratic senator in disfavor with the administration. His endorsement of Lawrence Camp for the Democratic nomination in Georgia against Senator George is the first personal move of offensive strategy Mr. Roosevelt has made against Democratic senators he rates as non-liberals. Up to now he has pursued defensive tactics in helping New Deal-favored senators to renomination.

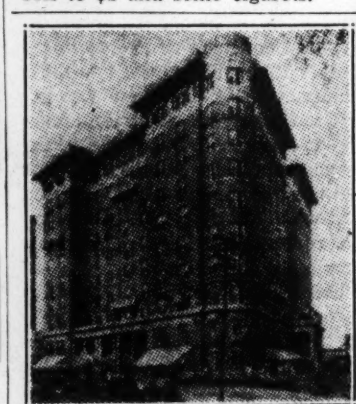

Observers Surprised.
The President's Warm Springs statement, expressing hope of Camp's nomination, caught Washington observers by surprise. They had looked for an indication of his attitude tomorrow but not before. The fact that Mr. Roosevelt disclosed his antipathy to George's return to the senate almost at the moment that he received word of the defeat of the administration-backed Senator Pope in Idaho, attracted attention. There was a disposition to read into the President's remark a quick reaction to that Idaho setback. It raised the question whether the President might not also indicate his disfavor toward Senator Smith in South Carolina.

So far, more than half of the Democratic senatorial nominations have been made. With the exception of Pope, of Idaho, every Democratic senator upon whom the President beamed directly has been nominated. Such intervention was followed by the nomination of Barkley in Kentucky, Thomas in Oklahoma, Pepper in Florida, Caraway in Arkansas and Bulkeley in Ohio.

Mr. Roosevelt has now risked rebuff in Georgia and possibly in South Carolina and Maryland if he intervenes against renomination of Senator Smith and Senator Tydings. He has intervened in Georgia in the face of reports from all three states that unseating any of the three senators is, at least, doubtful.

Corner concluded with the declaration: "Our quickest and surest relief will come from continuing to do the best we can with what we already have. These are our farms and our hopes are fastened on groups like this."

Speakers earlier in the day included I. W. Duggan, of the United States department of agriculture; Abit Nix, of Athens, member of the State Board of Regents; E. B. Weatherly, Blackley county livestock producer; Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern Fair, and others.

NORTHERN STAND AGAINST SOUTH HIT

there is no particular section or group that have a monopoly in this sort of social justice. I think we have a right to believe that there is other than an altruistic motive behind all the urging influences behind this legislation." He asked "far northern mills with their sectional support honest to goodness interested in getting more money for southern mill workers or do they see in this legislation a means for increasing northern jobs by stopping southern jobs?"

Of efforts by southerners to obtain parity freight rates with other sections, he said "when the southern textile interests were asking the Interstate Commerce Commission for the right to ship their stuff into northern and eastern territory, called official territory, at the same rate per mile as was enjoyed by northern manufacturers, our request was denied by that board."

Wants Industry.
"The south is asking for a chance to mix some industry with their agriculture. We realize that in a very large measure this industry will have to deal in staple things; that in the things we make there will naturally be a larger percentage of materials and a smaller percentage of labor cost. We think that this industry development will be most concerned in making more of the things we need in the south. However, we also want the opportunity of shipping beyond our states. Whatever of prosperity or increased income comes to us as a result will naturally be that many more dollars to be spent for those things in which there is less material and more labor, which come from the north." But, he added, "they are unwilling for us to manufacture things either for ourselves or for shipment outside our own state."

He said: "There are two ways to stop an intolerable industrial wage in the south. I am for both ways, they should run concurrently. One way is by statute but the fundamental basic way would be to improve the income of our farmers so that farm boys and girls would not leave the farm to accept an 'intolerable' industrial wage."

Corner concluded with the declaration: "Our quickest and surest relief will come from continuing to do the best we can with what we already have. These are our farms and our hopes are fastened on groups like this."

Speakers earlier in the day included I. W. Duggan, of the United States department of agriculture; Abit Nix, of Athens, member of the State Board of Regents; E. B. Weatherly, Blackley county livestock producer; Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern Fair, and others.

Nix in his address called on "every citizen to attack constantly those who would have us believe that democracy will not work."

Benton advocated a state appropriation of $100,000 to assist non-commercial Georgia fairs in promoting advancement of agriculture and livestock. He said such money "would be well spent" in promoting improvement in the state's agricultural growth.

Duggan said "Farmers will market from 5 to 10 per cent more this year than they did in 1929," whereas "industry will market 30 per cent less than in 1929." He declared "farm prices are 35 per cent less in 1933 than they were in 1929. Industry's prices are only 11 per cent less than in 1929."

H. Stanley Hastings, of Atlanta, declared "We cannot go on indefinitely depending on the government or any other agency for a living, or even a part of it. We must stand on our own feet and the sooner we do get back on our feet the better off we will be." He advocated that farmers "raise more food." He said the farmer in order to be economically independent "must first raise the majority of his food for himself, for his family and for his livestock, and then think about his cash crops, such as cotton, corn, etc."

Lewis F. Gordon, Atlanta banker, spoke on "The Relationship of the Banker to the Farmer." He said "The farmer must come to understand that his farm unit is a business and must be run along business lines." He also advocated diversified farming and urged farmers to keep abreast of farm market information.

E. S. Fay, of Atlanta, addressed the meeting on "The Beef Cattle Industry in the Southeast From the Viewpoint of the Packerman." He told the farmers to remember these four things: "1—Not necessarily more cattle, but better cattle; 2—not necessarily corned cattle, but cattle fed on crops we have, or can produce; 3—not necessarily top cattle, but good cattle; 4—not to expect miracles."

other cars will be secret services men who accompany every President of the United States.

The football stadium is the one which was dedicated by a football rival of the President's old college, Harvard University. This was Yale which came to Athens on October 12, 1929, and was defeated by Georgia, 15 to 0. Those who dissent politically from the President, took some slight hope that Harvard might meet the same fate as Yale in a Georgia campaign.

The President's party will reach the platform to the magnificent strains of the triumphant march from Verdi's opera "Aida." In the opera the returning soldiers come striding through the great gates and portals of the city.

The President and his party will walk up a ramp to the platform. The music will be played in the old college chapel by Professor Michael McDowell, acting head of the university's music department. The music will reach the field on the loud speakers.

After the exercises, Professor McDowell will play the university's Alma Mater song on the organ and the crowd will join in singing.

The invocation will be pronounced by Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the First Baptist church. Rivers on Program.

The program calls for President Caldwell to introduce Governor Rivers and Georgia's chief executive then will present the nation's chief executive.

After the address by the President, the degrees will be presented to 69 graduating students of the university who did not participate in the spring exercises. These summer exercises are accounted a part of the 135th commencement. This will be done by Dr. Caldwell. Professor W. D. Hooper will read a citation of the President's accomplishments.

Chancellor Sanford then will present to President Roosevelt the degree of doctor of laws, the first honorary degree to be voted by the university since the university system was reorganized in 1930. The degree was suggested by the late George Foster Peabody, long-time friend of the President and Georgia.

On to Barnesville.
There will be music after the presentation and the benediction will be pronounced by Dr. George Acree, pastor of the First Methodist church.

Immediately after the benediction the party will quit the platform and re-enter the cars and return to the railroad station.

Present plans call for the President's special to leave the station at 11 o'clock and proceed to Barnesville where the political son of the week will be touched off after some preliminary fireworks of yesterday at Warm Springs where the President endorsed Lawrence Camp; United States district attorney in Atlanta, for the United States senate in which Walter F. George, veteran of 16 years, is running for reelection.

40,000 Expected.
The occasion in Barnesville is the dedication of a rural electrification project in Lamar and three adjoining counties.

Predictions as to the crowd vary. University officials expect 40,000. The city is preparing to take care of that many. Hotels are jammed with members of the board of regents and their families. With other officials of the University System here to see the President and also in attendance at the annual home demonstration and 4-H club meeting.

Thousands of tourists are expected to come here from South Carolina and neighboring states to the north of Georgia. The weather prediction is for cloudy weather, but with no rain anticipated.

The crowd as predicted from other sections, is expected to reach more than twelve or fifteen thousand. President Roosevelt is the second inaugurated President to visit Athens. President William Howard Taft visited Athens and the university in 1909, but he had not been inaugurated.

The Republican President-elect was given a warm reception. The crowd was cordial and the ceiling of the chapel caught fire from a hot stove pipe. The visit was in early January, 1909. Taft rode in an open carriage and old-timers recall there was a near-mishap when the horses pulling the open carriage slipped on an asphalt street.

Special Police.
Taft appointed Joseph R. Lamar, of Augusta, as associate justice of the supreme court.

James Roosevelt, son of the President, visited Athens a little more than a year ago and spoke at a dinner in the halls of the co-ordinate college where today the farm women of the state and the board of regents had lunch.

In charge of the crowds tomorrow will be Police Chief E. W. Don Wood. He will be assisted by special police from Atlanta.

Our Senatorial Candidates Plan Campaign Respite

Speaking Programs Cancelled To Give Roosevelt Open Field.

Georgia's four senatorial candidates were active on the stump yesterday, but planned a respite from campaigning today to leave a field open for President Roosevelt, whose speech at Barnesville is eagerly anticipated in political circles.

Senator George declared in an

Atlanta speech today that "peanut politicians" were responsible for the "slandering or ignorant misrepresentations" that he was aligned with big business.

Senator George cited his votes for vocational education, banking reform, bank deposit insurance, mobilization of the gold reserve and control of the stock and commodity exchanges.

"I was fighting them—intelligently I hope—for every small businessman in this nation," he said. "But I am not afraid to represent every legitimate business in this state."

Against Six Vetoes.

"I have no such craven disposition in my soul as to hold up my hand against any honorable, against any useful, against any legitimate business in this state, or that may come in this state."

The senator also said that "six times have I taken the floor in the senate to override a presidential veto of bills that had been passed for the benefit of our veterans, or for their widows or orphans."

Camp declared that Senator George was "the leader of the efforts to destroy the prestige of the President and to besmirch and besmear his program."

"Senator George," he told the Carrollton gathering, "is the most subtle and most crafty enemy that President Roosevelt and his humanitarian program have in the United States senate."

Camp also referred to the fact that Senator George did not mention President Roosevelt in his July 4 opening at Vienna, and termed the omission evidence of "animosity toward the President."

It was at Griffin, Ga., two weeks later that Senator George referred to the President as a "great and good man."

Talmadge at Tifton. Talmadge, in an address at Tifton, criticized federal tariff policies and quota provisions of the farm bill.

"George voted for this farm bill," he said, "and now he is making himself ridiculous in the eyes of every farmer in Georgia by attempting to stop what he voted for—after speaking against it."

McRae declared at Warrenton the "Townsend-plan of taxation is the only plan ever devised that enables us to get our tax money back."

John J. Mangham, Bremen businessman and farmer, spoke at Lyons, Reidsville and Glennville, and Hugh Howell, Atlanta attorney, at Fitzgerald and Cordele in behalf of their gubernatorial candidacies.

Of all eight candidates in the races for the senate and the governorship, only Mangham was scheduled for campaign stump appearances tomorrow. He has a 10 a. m. engagement at Metter.

FRANCE PROTESTS ITALIAN VISA BAN

8,000 Fascist Tourists Denied Chance To Compare Living Conditions.

(Copyright, 1938, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(By Wireless) The true purpose of the visit paid yesterday to Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, by Jules F. Blondel, the French charge d'affaires in Rome, was to lodge a protest against the decision of the Italian authorities to refuse passport visas to 8,000 Italian tourists who intend to go to France August 15 for their holidays.

The French government may retaliate if that decision is not cancelled by the Italians.

Speculation is rife about the motives which may have inspired the Italian government. While some observers believe the Italian government is determined to spare its gold reserves and foreign currencies, others hold the view that it does not want to allow thousands of its nationals to judge for themselves what are the political and social conditions in France, which might counteract the violent press campaign consistently conducted against France.

Lately a Trieste paper went so far as to describe at length disturbances in Algiers. Mortes 45 years ago, in which several Italians were victims, as French feeling then was running high against Italy's participation in the Triple Alliance under Francesco Crispi.

In competent quarters, no great significance is attached to the report that the Brenner frontier is being fortified on the Italian side. It is recorded on all sides, on the contrary, that Italy, owing to economic distress, is sinking deeper and deeper into subjection to Germany.

AAA WILL ADJUST TOBACCO QUOTAS

Wallace Directs Move as Lower Grades Are Placed on Sale.

Machinery for the adjustment of marketing quotas was extended yesterday as Georgia growers began to haul lower grades of bright leaf tobacco to the 15 auction centers.

Volume continued heavy, but prices slumped, marking the increase in offerings of inferior grades.

At Washington, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace directed the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to review fluctuating tobacco quotas in all producing states and eliminate inequities.

Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials said they believed few adjustments would be necessary in any state except Georgia. They declared the situation in Georgia was caused by a large number of small growers who received minimum quotas, but that the farm law authorized adjustments to prevent the exemptions for small farms from causing quota inequalities on other farms.

The secretary's order followed study of Georgia marketing quotas, when it was found there had been inequitable allotments of poundage because of an insufficient allowance for the minimum allotments to small producers.

With about seven days of auctions yet to be held, Georgia already had marketed well over half the poundage allotted the state—approximately 76,000,000 pounds—and the dollar sales for the first seven days approached the total for the entire season of 1937.

Sample prices taken at Georgia markets in Georgia today showed an average of 16.60 at Moultrie and 17.37 at Valdosta. This compared with a state average of 23.81 for the second week of sales, 24.10 at Moultrie and 23.94 at Valdosta.

Nearly 2,000,000 pounds remained on the floors of Moultrie warehouses.

The provision in the farm act that minimum poundage for small growers must equal their average sales during the last three years had resulted in a drain on the total quotas for the state. Adjustments ordered in Georgia will be made in the Carolinas and other bright leaf markets under Wallace's order today.

Sales in Georgia last year exceeded $15,000,000. Already sales officially tabulated have amounted to $12,145,551 and unofficial forecasts were that the final figures would exceed the 1937 total.

BARNESVILLE READY TO FETE PRESIDENT IN TOP-NOTCH STYLE

Feverish Activity Marks Eve of Speech, as City Prepares Welcome.

By FRANK DRAKE, Constitution Staff Writer.
BARNESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 10. Though the political complexion of Barnesville's rural electrification celebration changed today when President Roosevelt flatly endorsed Lawrence Camp for senator, Barnesville citizens went right ahead tonight giving last calls to arrangements for the President's visit here tomorrow afternoon.

Feverish activity marked the eve of the President's arrival. Officials announced all in readiness to receive the town's most famous visitor and its greatest crowd.

Start at 2:45 P. M.
The President's train is scheduled to arrive in Barnesville at 1:45 o'clock, central standard time, and the program dedicating the Lamar rural electrification project will begin at the Gordon Memorial stadium at 2:05 o'clock, central standard time.

Governor Rivers, Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., and Mrs. Virginia Polhill Price, Democratic national committeewoman, will assist in the ceremonies preceding the President's speech.

Both Senator George and Camp are to be on the platform with the President, but neither is to speak, switch to dedicate the 144 miles of rural electric lines to serve 357 farm families.

Reception Committee.

Mayor J. A. Cason, arrangements committee chairman, and Mrs. W. B. Smith, co-chairman of the reception committee, will lead a delegation of 100 Lamar county citizens to greet the nation's chief executive when his train pulls in at the station.

On the platform at the stadium, Harvey J. Kennedy, Barnesville lawyer and chairman of the program committee, will present Senator Russell, who will act as master of ceremonies. Following introduction of the directors of the Lamar Electric Membership Corporation, John M. Carmody, administrator of the REA, and Mrs. Price will speak briefly. Senator Russell will introduce Governor Rivers, who will present President Roosevelt.

Hour's Program.

The program will last about an hour. Preparations to accommodate approximately 40,000 persons and 15,000 cars were made today.

Mayor Cason and Police Chief Scott Riviere estimated fully that many will attend the celebration. Captain Jack Malcom, of Atlanta, is marshal for the day and announced tonight that no parking will be allowed on the streets of Barnesville during the day. One hundred and twenty-five policemen from Atlanta, Macon, Griffin and surrounding towns are coming tomorrow morning to aid in handling the crowds.

Many REA officials from Washington, including Carmody, arrived here today, to take part in the dedication of the project which will serve residents of Lamar, Upson, Pike and Monroe counties.

Carmody tonight was honor guest at barbecue given for REA officials and officers of the Lamar Electric Membership Corporation.

H. L. Smith, president of the corporation; E. C. Milner, treasurer; A. N. Moye, secretary; Will Elder, P. L. Carter, J. E. Ballard and W. H. Dunn are the directors of the corporation who will sit on the platform with the President and be introduced to the crowd.

All day long today, trucks and vans brought food and drink into this little city of less than 5,000 population. Thousands and thousands of bottles filled with soda pop were being stacked in scores of stands that have mushroomed up as the day of the President's visit approached.

Barnesville Prepares To Welcome 40,000 at REA Dedication Ceremony Today

Forty thousand persons are expected to visit Barnesville today to hear the President as he dedicates the Lamar rural electrification project. Here are the police officials who will direct handling the crowd. Left to right are Captain Jack Malcom, of Atlanta, marshal of the day; Chief Scott Riviere, of Barnesville, and Chief J. S. Harper, of Griffin, as they map plans for maintaining order and moving thousands of cars.

Last-minute details of the dedication of the Lamar Electric Membership Corporation's rural electrification project are being mapped here by high REA officials. Left to right are George D. Munger, director of the REA utilization division; John M. Carmody, REA administrator; Harold F. Clark, REA field representative, and W. Y. Andrews, project superintendent. Carmody arrived in Barnesville yesterday and will speak briefly this afternoon. The Lamar project has 144 miles of rural electric lines, costing $127,000.

Constitution Staff Photos-Roton. All ready for the visit of President Roosevelt are Harvey Kennedy (left), Barnesville lawyer and chairman of the dedication program committee, and H. L. Smith, president of the Lamar Electric Membership Corporation. Kennedy is one of the sponsors of the celebration at which President Roosevelt is to be the speaker this afternoon. Smith heads the group of farmers and rural residents in four counties who own the rural electrification project. They are going over the President's schedule to be sure no detail is overlooked. Both Kennedy and Smith will be on the stand.

hide their displeasure at Rivers' determination to run his own race.

Effect on Rivers.
Just what effect the out and out endorsement of Camp by the President will have on the Rivers organization remains to be seen. It had no immediate effect yesterday.

There was no comment from Rivers leaders and the Governor's only statement at Warm Springs was that he is still running his own race.

The endorsement had no evident effect on the George organization. Senator George received the news of the President's announced opposition in his campaign headquarters here. There was no comment.

The senator's headquarters also remained silent, although leaders said that Senator George would be at Barnesville today.

No Talmadge Comment.
Ex-Governor Talmadge, who some observers feel stands to benefit as much as Camp by the President's action, was at Camilla yesterday. He heard the news an hour before he mounted the speaking platform, but he made no comment.

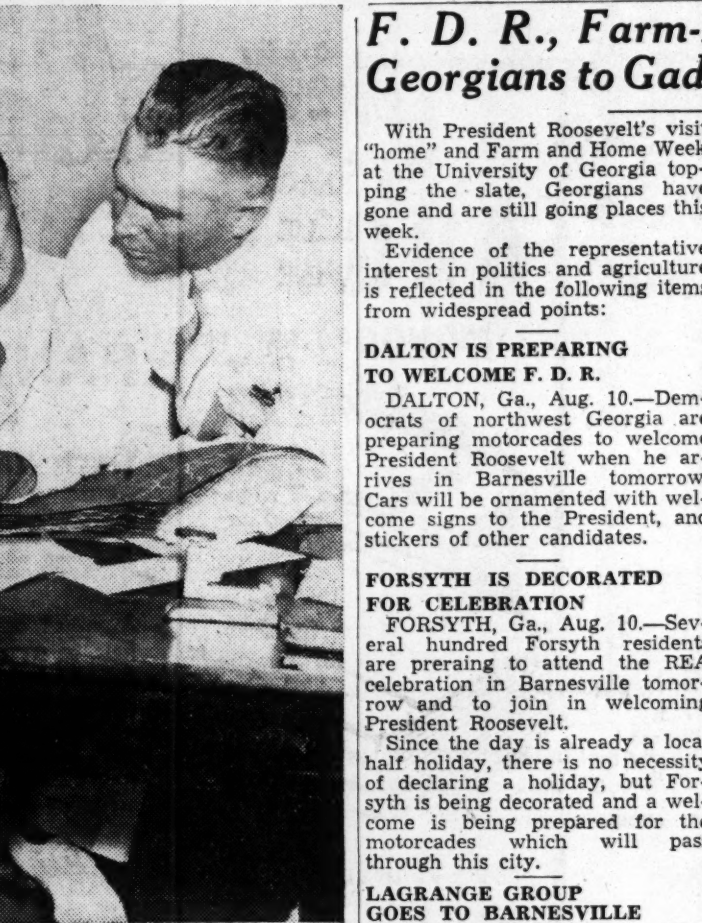

Talmadge's headquarters here said the ex-Governor might have something to say Friday at Gainesville.

"We do not expect anything from Mr. Talmadge as long as President Roosevelt is in the state," a Talmadge aide said.

William G. McRae, Atlanta attorney, the fourth candidate in the senate race, informed that Mr. Roosevelt had said he "hoped"

Two pretty Barnesville girls are seen here on a sparkling new electric ice box, such as will brighten the kitchen of many a rural housewife when the Lamar rural electrification project gets under way with the dedication by President Roosevelt today. Left to right, they are Misses Frances and Mimi Keenan. The sink is part of an exhibit shown to illustrate how many modern conveniences can be brought to electrified farms.

Camp would be the next senator, countered with "I hope not." Employees Analyze Record.
It was learned here yesterday that while the President was cruising in the waters of the Pacific a number of New Deal subofficials and employees were working up a detailed report of Senator George's record in congress and the information has been laid before the chief executive for his possible use at Barnesville today.

So it appeared last night that although the President had come out strong for Camp, there are many things he still can say or cannot say. And his speech at Barnesville this afternoon will tell the story.

Roosevelt Guards Ban 'Electric Eye'

By A STAFF CORRESPONDENT

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 10. President Roosevelt's looker outer-afterers, the secret service men, put the clamp on us of a most modern electrical appliance tomorrow when the chief executive dedicates the rural electrification project here.

REA officials planned to use an "electric eye" for the President to start the juice flowing in miles and miles of rural electric lines. But the secret service men took a look at the gadget and decided against it. The didn't say why, they only said "no."

The President will electrify the lines with a plain, old-fashioned pull switch.

RESIDENT ACCORDS THE NOD TO CAMP SURPRISE SPEECH

endorsement Comes at 'Family' Luncheon of Foundation Patients, Officials.

ntleman who I hope will be the st senator from this state, Lawrence Camp."

Mr. Camp acknowledged the induction in a storm of applause.
Newspapermen traveling with the President from Pensacola to Washington had been assured that thing eventful would happen at the luncheon and none attended.
"Was to be strictly 'a family affair,' they had been told, an informal gathering of the foundation's patients and staff to greet the President on his return from his fishing trip in equatorial waters."

Secretaries Surprised.
The President's quiet departure from this innocent schedule was expected even to his secretaries, the crowd moved toward the door, Secretary Stephen G. Early led out of the dining room to a tooth, from where he telephoned the news to the unsuspecting correspondents on the special in parked on a siding near the arm Springs station.
"We didn't expect the President make a speech," said Early, but he did say this—"and he noted the President's words verbatim."

A stenographer who had sat at the President's elbow made a transcript of the words and they are distributed to the press.

Calls Visit Surprise.
The full text of the President's remarks:

"This little visit of mine was a of a surprise. This had not been planned in March when I was here. We were able to do it because I found that the quickest route from catching fish on the cific ocean was to come back by way of Warm Springs. I have been telling people that there is ly one fly in the ointment. Down on the equator, on what are called the Galapagos islands, it is out ten degrees cooler than it is Georgia."

"We are very much honored in living today as guests of Warm Springs Governor Rivers, who is old friend of ours, and also a
st senator from this state, Lawrence Camp."

"This year I am making up for 37. You will remember in 1937 could only get down here in the ring and could not get here in e autumn, but this is my second sit in 1938 and I am coming back hope, if everything goes well, in November for a couple of weeks ad at that time we will have the ual Thanksgiving dinner when ere is a grand entertainment and ost of us eat too much. It is ood to get this glimpse of you and hope to see you again very soon."
Lawrence Camp walked lightly at of the dining room. Asked if e detected any other remark in President's speech that might be construed as favorable to his ndidacy, Camp answered: "Nothg."

Long Conference.
After the luncheon and its momentous pronouncement, Presi-ent Roosevelt adjourned with Camp and Governor Rivers to his fice in an adjoining cottage, where he spent more than an our in conference with the two ampions of the New Deal cause Georgia and then devoted the est of the afternoon to the dictaon of the speeches he is to make tomorrow at Athens and Barnesville.

Their audience with the Presi-ent concluded, Camp and Rivers journeyed to the porch, where they spent more than half an our in earnest conference.
After this conference, Governor Rivers joined his son, Ed Jr., and returned back to Atlanta. Camp walked back into the office and half an hour later Secret Service men announced that he had ipped out through a back door and had gone.

Governor Rivers stepped confidently toward his automobile.
"Did the President have anything to say in your behalf?" he was asked.

Races Separated.
"No, I'm still running for governor," he answered. "Mr. Camp and my race are being conducted separately. Our interests are involved in no way."

"What did you and the President discuss?" Rivers was asked.

"Oh, we merely talked about rops and economics."
Observers at Warm Springs today agreed that President Roosevelt's introduction of his Georgia political issues into the "family hat" at the Foundation indicated that he would fire with both barrels when he speaks from the platform at Barnesville tomorrow.

The President and his secretarial force went to work in earnest this afternoon on the final revisions of the Athens speech and the preparation of the Barnesville address. Installation of the La-

Camp Nod Is First Against Incumbent

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Aug. 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's endorsement today of Lawrence S. Camp for senator from Georgia was the executive's first bid for defeat of an incumbent senator.

In his cross-country tour to San Diego, Cal., Mr. Roosevelt spoke only in favor of returning to office senators who have supported the administration.

Among those incumbents the President gave a friendly nod were Senators Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, each of whom has been renominated, and Senator Hattie W. Caraway, who was leading in the Arkansas election count.

occupy the greater portion of the Barnesville address, but the accomplishments of REA in Georgia are expected to be used to combat the critics, among whom he classes Senator George.

Doubled Interest.
With today's premature announcement of his keen interest in Georgia's senatorial battle, it is expected that the crowd will be doubled tomorrow. His single remark in Camp's behalf being expected to attract those who believe that he will leave nothing unsaid to win another state to overwhelming approval of the New Deal policies.

Whether the President's influence will be sufficient to unseat George and replace him with Camp was disputed today, even among the citizens of Meriwether county, of which Warm Springs is now the focal political point.

Residents of the President's "other home" in Georgia were free in predicting that George would carry Meriwether easily.

He's a fine neighbor and we love him," it was said, "but we doubt if the President will be able to carry Meriwether county against Senator George."

Thousands greeted the President when he stepped off the train here this morning.

Eight-Car Special.
The eight-car special moved quietly in between dense crowds of Georgians, who stood patiently waiting for more than an hour before the President appeared.

Stepping out from his air-conditioned private car, the President recoiled when he felt the heat outdoors, but beamed in the familiar Roosevelt fashion and waved his hat at the cheering crowds.

"This is hotter than it was at the equator," he called.

The President entered his small-model private automobile, shook hands with a few of his own friends and neighbors and drove off down the lane to the Warm Springs Foundation. He spent the morning driving about the neighborhood, visiting familiar spots and calling on old friends.

About 1 o'clock, he drove back into the grounds of the foundation and was honor guest at the luncheon.

Shortly after lunch, he received officials of the Georgia Affiliated Democratic Woman's Clubs, who were in Warm Springs this morning establishing a chapter in Meriwether county.

Other Georgians who visited President Roosevelt and his entourage when the train stopped at Warm Springs today were Wiley Moore, Congressman Robert Ramspeck, Judge Henry Revell and Al Belle Isle. None of these attended the luncheon at the Foundation.

'Lightning-Therapy' Cures His Game Ankle
GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 10.—(UP)—Complete cure of a "game" ankle by "lightning-therapy" was reported today by Roy B. White, 63, commercial artist.

White broke his left ankle last January and since has been able to walk only with a cane. He says:

"I was seated near an open window in my living room last night, when lightning struck close by, blowing out a fuse in an adjacent building.

"It made my ankle feel warm and after that I discovered I could walk without my cane."

GEORGIA SAYS "WELCOME" AGAIN

Once again, Georgia welcomes back to the state a part-time resident, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He comes, as always, as a much admired and beloved "good neighbor," one who stands high in the liking of Georgians for his own personality as well as for the high position he holds; one who would be gladly welcomed for his simple friendship, though he came as the most unassuming of private citizens.

There are three special reasons this time, however, which add significance and interest to his presence in the state.

He is to receive an honorary degree from the University of Georgia today. The oldest chartered state university will bestow upon him its highest honors and, henceforth, he will be a "son of Georgia" in more senses than one.

He is to throw the switch, at Barnesville, which will bring the blessings of electric light and power into 700 rural Georgia homes. Through the Rural Electrification Administration, one of the finest of all the agencies of the New Deal, that new concept in government of which President Roosevelt is the sponsor, this modern servant of mankind goes to lift the drudgery and to make brighter the living conditions of 700 Georgia homes.

Thirdly, he has injected himself into Georgia politics. Yesterday, at Warm Springs, he publicly stated he hoped this state would send to the United States senate Lawrence Camp, one of the candidates in the Democratic primary. That endorsement of the Camp candidacy was expected, for it was as an administration-selected candidate that District Attorney Camp entered the race.

President Roosevelt has thus asked Georgians to make their senator a man who is sworn to 100 per cent support of the New Deal, whatever policies it may advocate. He has asked Georgia to relegate to private citizenship Senator Walter F. George, who has brought honor to the name of Georgia in the United States senate for 16 years.

President Roosevelt has done this because he remembers occasions when Senator George opposed some proposals of the New Deal—proposals which the Georgia senator did not believe for the ultimate good of the nation.

What the reaction of Georgians may be to this entry of the President of the United States into their state political affairs no man can predict. They may resent it, as outside interference. Their friendship for President Roosevelt may override that resentment.

In any event, they will listen to him today with native southern courtesy. The sincerity of their welcome to the man will be in nowise lessened because of anything he may say as the politician.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, regardless of political development, can never be any other than a highly respected "good neighbor" in his personal contacts with all citizens of Georgia.

THE ARMY COMES THROUGH

Completion of Uncle Sam's most elaborate army maneuvers in history has brought a reassuring statement from Major General George Van Horn Moseley, commander of the fourth corps area. "The American people can look to their army with complete confidence," he said, in discussing the week-long exercises featured by the closest simulation to actual warfare ever before attempted in peacetime.

Terming the maneuvers "highly successful," General Moseley pointed with pride to the army's solving of one of the great problems of the maneuvers. This was the assembling in southern Mississippi of more than 27,000 officers and men from great distances. "This showed," the general said, "that these troops were prepared to make the move and that, in an emergency, large forces could be assembled in an orderly fashion and in a short time on any threatened point along the southern coastal frontier."

Also reassuring was the maneuver's emphasis on self-reliance. For the men were placed in the field with only regular field equipment, which gave officers and soldiers a chance to shift for themselves. Yet with only stripped field equipment, they solved all problems of supply, sanitation and combat. Other difficulties which the men overcame were theoretical problems of the message that failed to arrive, the command which took the wrong road, and the truck train which was captured or stuck in the mud.

General Moseley also paid tribute to the fine spirit which prevailed. "Not a grumble was heard from the lads who struggled in the mud and dust," he said. The earnestness with which the men tackled their jobs was shown in all reports. Once again, the army comes through with flags flying.

CAPTIVES OF THE CITY

Bucolic nature, for those who have never been able to get out of their slum homes to find the verdant trees and lush growth of the countryside, is entrancing the younger element of New York's eastside, where a truck trailer, 17-feet long, brings the mountain to Moham-med, as it were.

That worms are "snakes" and rakes, "combs," does not lessen the pleasure of these youngsters, but, the New York Times reports, a man-made Japanese beetle trap took first honors for attention from the visitors to the trailer. They were entranced by the captives swarming within, little realizing they, too, are captives of the kind. Little people doomed to unhealthy, narrow existences in blighted areas.

This was New York, and it is perhaps difficult to realize that in Atlanta are children who also have never seen the country; who find their little worlds circumscribed by dirty streets, squalid homes and dust-laden air. Their very existence is a challenge for those to whom advantages are commonplace things, and a challenge to the civilization that has been built through the years.

This is the condition that has been cited repeatedly by social workers of Atlanta, and which has prompted their plea for additional funds from the city and county for the provision of direct relief to the parents of these youngsters. "Many," they say, "have actually gone hungry." They are forced to exist on an allotment that scarcely maintains life. The children's "resistance to disease is impaired, their outlook on life warped. . . . you can picture the kind of citizenship this is building."

It has been estimated that, on the basis of the present relief load of approximately 2,900 cases, $71,814 will be required this year for actual relief, exclusive of the cost of administration. The failure to provide for these children and their parents, unable to work, is building a tragic heritage for the city. Little bodies and minds are stunted because of this failure, and their plight will be visited again to their children and their children's children.

It is time Atlanta and Fulton county abandon a hand-to-mouth relief program and provided a realistic, humane and intelligent plan for the care of those who cannot help themselves.

STATISTICS POINT MORALS

That death lurks at the cross-roads is revealed in an analysis of traffic accidents by the National Safety Council. According to the council's statistics, approximately 58 per cent of accidents involving injury occurred at intersections last year. In the rural areas, 24 per cent were cross-road accidents. Of the city mishaps, 52 per cent were right-angle collisions.

Which would seem to indicate that he who drives carefully at intersections has a better chance to live long than he who laughs at cross-roads. The answer seems to be slow down at intersections, and, if necessary, come to a stop, a good, old-fashioned, full halt.

The council also points out that women have a better chance of survival on the highways than men. In 1937, for every 100,000 males in the country, 119.6 were killed in accidents. For every 100,000 women in the United States, 51.3 died by motor murder.

Advisability of having one's car in good condition is also stressed in the figures, which showed that 9 per cent of the vehicles in traffic fatalities were defective. The council also notes that drivers under 20 years of age have the highest accident rate. Youth apparently serves death well.

The figures point their own morals.

Germany reverts to her historic attitude, that the weak nations are a menace to the strong nations—a joke almost old enough for the coast-to-coast networks.

Even where man has been bent on destruction, mother nature has smiled this year. It would be a great planet if it weren't for the people.

No doubt the new model harvesters will have comptometers attached, thus throwing book-keepers by the thousands out of work on western farms.

The new rulers make it a pleasure to join the British army. Pensions will be higher, retirement ages lower, and, in event of war, one will be at the front, far from the slaughter.

Five times one is five, or should be, and if five observers see a plane fall in the far eastern fighting, that's five planes, isn't it?

Editorial of the Day

THE BAR ON GUARD

Lawyers have, as a matter of course, always been active in the fight to preserve civil liberties, for it is their privilege to conduct all court cases in defense of the rights guaranteed to the individual by the state and federal constitutions. But, as a general rule, lawyers have come into these matters only when retained. The initiative in this work has been left chiefly to lay associations which took on themselves responsibility for lending assistance and furnishing counsel whenever constitutional freedom of speech or of assembly was threatened.

Frank J. Hogan, the new president of the American Bar Association, now proposes that the bar go a step further in this important field and take upon themselves the task of seeing that citizens whose civil liberties may be threatened are afforded adequate legal defense. Such a proposal is to be welcomed. It promises to reinforce a line that has never been as fully defended as it might have been and one that is of the utmost importance to every man, woman and child in this country. With a national committee of lawyers constantly on the watch for threats to civil liberty and constantly ready to provide for local aid to those who may be lacking in the means of defense, suppression of the rights of the individual will become much more difficult than it has been.

It goes without saying that Mr. Hogan does not propose to have the bar's committee step in in every case. He envisages a program under which cases will be sifted and by means of which the line will be reinforced at points at which it seems to be weakest. If this program is carried out, he will make a record as president on which the whole bar association may look with satisfaction.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

(Editor's Note: Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner, co-authors of "The Capital Parade," are today in Georgia, here to observe and to write about the political situation in this state. The column for today was written in Atlanta. It shows, in interesting fashion, how the Georgia senatorial primary appears, in its present stage, to experienced commentators who view with national, rather than local, perspective.)

GEORGIA "PURGE" BECOMES COMIC Down at Warm Springs yesterday, the President was taking stock of the Georgia situation. If he really desires to dethrone Senator Walter F. George, what he found should make him hopping mad. The great White House purge has degenerated into rather sordid slapstick comedy.

One would suppose that the first step in the campaign against the hated George would have been to mobilize all federal employees behind his New Deal opponent, United States District Attorney Lawrence S. Camp. By ineptitude and divided councils, this step has been bungled. Three-quarters of the boys on the New Deal payroll are plunging for George.

Working in mass formation behind the renegade New Dealers are the utilities, the banks, railroads and the large industries of Georgia. In fact, you have to look twice to tell this group of Senator George's supporters from the fat cats of Pennsylvania politics in the palmy Republican days. Against such a lineup, poor Camp, a decent, personable enough fellow, has got nowhere to date. And the only discernible threat to George comes from the brash, red-galleged magazine, Ten, who once tried to make an issue of Mrs. Roosevelt's disapproval of lynching.

That is the picture, as of yesterday. It may be completely changed today, if the President does put on his shining armor and rides into the fray with real enthusiasm. He can dragoon the federal officeholders into line. He can draw a clear issue between himself and George. Above all, he can appeal to the voting masses of Georgia, who hold him in adoring respect. He may not win his fight, but seasoned observers are unanimous that he can greatly shorten the odds against his side.

FLIP-FLOPPERS If the President cracks his whip, some people are going to have to perform pretty undignified flip-flops. The estimate that three-quarters of the federal officials are publicly or privately backing George comes from a person close to the senate, an entire confirmed empirical expert. And it is further supported by the almost ludicrous openness with which certain federal bigwigs are working for the man who once called the President a "traitor."

For example, Edgar Dunlap is the local counsel of Jesse Jones' Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He is also the extremely astute behind-the-scenes manager of the George campaign, the companion of the senator on his oratorical expeditions, and a principal money-raiser. Then the R.F.C.'s Georgia manager is Scott Candler—the same Scott Candler who was photographed for the papers paying George's election entrance fee.

Informed sources state that Marion Allen, collector of internal revenue, and R. E. Matheson, state director of the Federal Housing Administration, are both friendly to the George candidacy. The collector of customs in Savannah and the federal attorney at Macon are also named. And so it goes.

THE DESERTERS On every side, the President's natural allies have left him in the lurch. Indeed, the Georgia situation is a horror proof of the old adage that the only way to be sure you've got a politician is to nail him down.

A leading renegade outside the federal pay roll is the Governor, Ed Rivers. Rivers has always proclaimed his New Dealism from the housetops, and when there was thought of running him against George, he showed great interest in the purge. But now he tells you, "I'm neutral on the senatorship. I'm for the New Deal and the President, but I'm staying out of everything except my own race for re-election."

Then there is Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., another self-proclaimed New Dealer. Camp and Russell are former college roommates, and Russell was expected to come out strongly for the New Deal candidate. Instead he is lying low, while his brother Bob is supporting George. Only Russell's father, the chief justice of the state, is openly opposed to George.

For all these reasons, people tell you that "if the President doesn't openly attack George and come out for Camp, Camp will be in a tough spot. He's in one now." They add, however, that "you've always got to remember Gene Talmadge." The truth is that Georgia politics seem to be an ideal field for the Talmadge talents.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

When hope seems dead,
Life not worth while,
Quiet thought
A blessing sends,
Reflection brings
New cause to smile
In memories
Of old friends.

She Doesn't Agree. For differences of opinion that make life interesting.

In the morning mail came a letter from a new friend, signing herself Mrs. Herbert Jackson. And she frankly admits that Silhouettes of Monday last made her "so mad." The subject was that proposed appointment of George.

For all these reasons, people tell you that "if the President doesn't openly attack George and come out for Camp, Camp will be in a tough spot. He's in one now." They add, however, that "you've always got to remember Gene Talmadge." The truth is that Georgia politics seem to be an ideal field for the Talmadge talents.

Second point of objection by Mrs. Jackson was a phrase from Monday's column which said all of us who drive cars break some rules or other every day. She seemed to think this sentence was a condoning of dangerous violations of the rules for safety. It wasn't. But it is neverless. We do break rules, every day, all of us. Including Mrs. Jackson's husband, though he is, as she says, an excellent driver and a man of better than average reflexes.

There Are So Many Rules. The truth is that, driving anywhere, any motorist is bound to do something the rules say he shouldn't, unconsciously, and, 999 times out of 1,000 harmlessly.

I know I break 'em. And yet, I do try, as much as I possibly can, to obey 'em. I've never had a really serious accident in more than 25 years of driving (pause for business of touching wood), but those minor ones which I've been involved have always been caused by a violation of a rule—either my own violation or the other fellow's.

One time I didn't see the other fellow at all. But he had been parked on a curve and had left a puddle of oil to mark the spot. It rained, the road was slippery anyway, and when my right wheels struck the oil puddle—and my left wheels didn't—my car spun like one of those insane mice in the middle of the concrete and finally landed against a tree on the roadside. I gave thanks it wasn't a ditch at that particular spot.

That, However, Is Disgraceful. However, reference to that incident is digression from the main topic.

There may be 250 responsible citizens in Atlanta, people of good character and high repute, willing to enlist in the organization of traffic violation reporters. But, frankly, I'm not one of them.

I'm too conscious of my own shortcomings to go and tell on the other guy.

I think the local traffic relem would be solved if all those potential reporters would read the fifth verse of the seventh chapter of St. Matthew. Where it says: "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

Twenty-five Years Ago Today. From The Constitution of Monday, August 11, 1913:

"Tax revision will be the paramount issue before the legislature during this, the last week of its present session, which adjourns on Thursday."

And Fifty Years Ago. From The Constitution of Saturday, August 11, 1888:

"Mr. W. L. Peel, of the firm of Maddox, Russell & Co., has returned from his trip to Europe. He looks much refreshed and rested, and enjoyed his vacation very much. Mr. Peel visited England, Scotland, France and Germany during his absence."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Cluttered With "NEW YORK, Underserved Pity" The problem of medical and surgical treatment for the masses is cluttered with underserved pity for people who have convinced themselves that they can't pay the doctor for easing their pains or saving their lives, but could so if they tried. The doctors of this country give away more free goods off their shelves than the members of any other profession, including the actors and musicians, who come next. They have their gyps and rotters, their publicity-crazy hams and ignoramuses, but they do more good to suffering humanity and in critical moments than the members of any other calling.

Of course, it will be argued that they should do this because they are in a position to. That is their job. But the fact is, nevertheless, that they do give their service, and it is a further fact that society doesn't appreciate the good they do. People overemphasize their mistakes of judgment or negligence, forgetting that a doctor's mistake is more likely to have fatal or, anyway, dreadful consequences than a mistake by a plumber, a grocer or a journalist. If the work of the plumber springs a leak, if the grocer sends snookies instead of snackies, or if the reporter names W. C. Smith as correspondent in the divorce story when it should have been W. G. Smith, that means "very little" to anyone's fenders. But let a doctor make a comparable mistake and there is all hell to pay, on top of the fact that maybe he stood to be swindled out of his pay—or most of it, anyway—even if he had done a bang-up job.

Sticking To Phases of the question. There are many phases of the question, but I mean to stick to this one for today's lesson. I am thinking of those who think that $200 is an outrageous price to pay for the removal of an appendix which has developed the menacing nature of a bomb in the patient's innards. The surgeon gets the victim into a hospital as quickly as possible, gives him a jab of something to relax him and in a very short time is delving around in his gullets without 50 cents on the line to pay for laundering his smock.

So the patient gets well, and when the bad news comes he forgets that feeling as of a litter of porcupines frisking about in his abdomen, forgets how scared he was and his alarm for the security of his dependent family, and calls the doctor a burglar. Why, he makes only $25 a week, and so, instead of paying the doctor a dollar a week, as he would pay the installment man for the radio or sewing machine, his policy is to skip it entirely. He is entirely right. He is also, that if the surgeon hadn't done his stuff promptly and well, specialized stuff that nobody but a surgeon could have done, his family would be on the town right now.

If a patient can pay small amounts to a co-operative over a spell of years for treatment which he may need in the future, he can just as well pay a doctor a stated amount each week over a long term for treatment which he has already received. But in too many cases he just won't, and the doctor is accused of bearing down on a man who can't afford to pay for the saving of his life but can manage somehow to come up with the price of many non-essentials.

Doctors Rob Many doctors nowadays serve patients in the public clinics who are able to pay reasonable professional rates for their treatment. In this way the doctor is compelled to rob his own family of the just rewards of his service, so that other men's families may be deadhead. Patients lie about their income and pretend to be in tatters who they value more, their money or their lives. And the ethics of the profession and sentimental sympathy for the invalid are such that if the patient were asked to stand for a frisk to prove his inability to pay, that would be a callous outrage and the doctor would be an extortioner.

But there is no great wrong in that, considering how minutely the people's affairs are searched by income tax men, we hear that it is degrading to the applicant to send investigators nosing into their family earnings, if any, when the problem is one of relief or medical treatment, but that is something that all those who have taxable incomes must submit to at any time the government feels invasive.

There is more or less larceny in all the human race, and this problem of medicine for the masses would be less difficult if those who can pay were prevented from appealing to public sympathy at the doctor's expense by mingling with the truly destitute.

A Generous Peace Can Be Made Only by the Man on Top

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

One warm Sunday morning, Grandpa Marler sat in a hickory chair on his back porch, comfortably tilted against the corner post, his heels caught on the lowest rung, his spirit soothed by the lone some country sounds that Sunday makes less somber.

On the top porch step a lordly gamecock, Grandpa's pride and joy, lifted his head and sounded a shrill, far challenge to all the world.

Grandpa chuckled and murmured fondly in his beard: "Fighting rooster this side the mountains."

It was an epitaph. As though prompted by the flattery, the gamecock slapped his wings three times with a sound like the sharp crack of a rifle, raised himself on his toes and threw back his head to oblige with an encore.

The first valiant note ended in a squawk. A younger cock, hearing the first challenge, had started from the barn to investigate. Fifty feet from the porch he began to run, head down; a moment later he was clear of the ground, flying straight for the challenger, feet foremost like a base runner sliding into home.

He struck as he came in, and Grandpa's favorite never knew what hit him.

Grandpa leaped to his feet with a yell of anguish and rage and reached inside the screen door for his 12-gauge shotgun, which he kept handy for hawks.

The young rooster was retreating toward the barn, but Grandpa got him with the first shot. Then he walked close and gave him the other barrel in plain vindictiveness and malice of heart.

It eased his anguish, but it was a blunder. To make up for the loss of one rooster, he killed another. Infuriated by one murder, the committed a second. As a piece of inexcusable imbecility it couldn't have been surpassed by a great diplomat.

Yet Grandpa's method is universal. In the Kentucky mountains it is called a feud; statesmen call it reprisal. Moses called it an eye for an eye.

A just man sees a big boy slap a small one. "Pick on some body your size!" he roars, and slaps the big boy down.

A man insane with rage murders his neighbor, and the law acting for all men, deliberately murders him.

Decent people, outraged by Japan's bombing of Chinese cities long for power to stop it. But how? One speaks the thoughts of millions. "The Japs need a dose of their own medicine," says he. "I'd like to blow their cities to Kingdom Come."

It won't work, for there is no end. We've got to find another method. And the only man who can end the feud is the one whose turn it is to shoot next.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

The President ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 10.—Mr. Roosevelt, who Thursday morning will receive a diploma from the University of Georgia but who won't have the usual job problem of the college graduate, jumped the gun yesterday at Warm Springs.

He wrapped the embracing political arm about the shoulders of Lawrence Camp and asked the people of Georgia to name him to the senate of the United States.

This takes some of the edge off the Barnesville meeting. The President can only amplify. It may take something off the crowd, too, because one and all had been planning to be there to see and hear what would be said about Georgia politics.

Everyone who knows the President at all, knew he would take a hand in the senatorial race. He never had any other idea. He is stubborn and he likes a fight. Barnesville will see him take off the wraps and deliver the real attack. He was sparring today.

F. D. R. Attracts 5 Talmadge Votes Athens, Ga., Aug. 10.—The President's arrival tomorrow and for the annual farm extension bureau week, did not buzz with conversation. It echoed with it.

There were men here from all sections of the state. One and all agree the President will attract five votes to Eugene Talmadge for every one he attracts to Lawrence Camp. Before the President spoke, the race was between Walter F. George and Eugene Talmadge. Having spoke, the race still is between the man from Vienna, veteran of 16 years in the senate and a member of important committees, and Eugene Talmadge, noisy, full of plans impossible of support or execution.

It is not believed by one in ten political minded people of the state the President can put Lawrence Camp in the race. He is undoubtedly has come to believe that Walter F. George is a man of sufficient power to have a following not only in the senate but in the south and especially in Georgia. He undoubtedly believes that Eugene Talmadge, at best would make much noise, would himself be much in the publicity spotlight, but would be unable to attract any following and would not be able in any manner, except by a lone negative vote, to handicap any one of the President's measures.

This being his opinion, he is willing to back Camp hoping for his election but probably not really believing in it himself. The alternative is Talmadge and he prefers that to George.

How will George react?

There are those who believe Senator George is not a New Dealer and that he has been a reactionary and is dangerous to the present trends in the national government which are away from strict interpretation of the constitution.

At any rate, the fat is in the fire and the race still is between George and Talmadge.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
 Editor Constitution: We hear a lot about President Roosevelt running for a third term. Numerous third-term advocates maintain that Mr. Roosevelt is the only man who could successfully guide the American people as their president. Out of 130,000,000 people, only one man, according to statements of some of these third-term believers could qualify President.
 I was thinking what a calamity would befall the United States, should Mr. Roosevelt become sick and pass away. Imagine what a ghastly catastrophe leaving America with no one from a population of 130,000,000 who could come the President. Everyone would hope that the President will retain good health indefinitely as we do not wish to be faced with such a grave situation.
 I am not personally acquainted with the 130,000,000 persons who comprise the population of the United States, but I am on speaking terms with more than 1,000 American men, some of whom are executives of large businesses, physicians, lawyers, mechanics, merchants, miners, clerks, professors in institutions of learning, teachers, printers, newspapermen, engineers, congressmen, senators and men from many more walks of life, any one of whom would make just as good a president as Franklin D. Roosevelt or any of his predecessors, and in many instances, much better.

 I do not desire to take the slightest credit from the present chief executive as any fair-minded person will have to admit possibly no other President of the United States ever faced more numerous complicated and world-wide difficulties than those which greeted Franklin D. Roosevelt and all must admit he has handled them in an excellent manner. We will all also have to admit, whether we like it or not, that no man is indispensable and that there are several millions of American men who would make excellent presidents.

ARKANSAS LIKES GEORGIA, GEORGIANS
 Editor Constitution: I just want to tell you and the people of Georgia what I think of your beautiful state.
 I have traveled extensively over the United States for the past four years—and I think Georgia is one of the most beautiful states in the Union. Such a natural beauty—too, I like the Georgia people. I like them because they are so what they are—no camouflage or show to them.
 I intend to write a book some day about the people of the United States of America as I get to know them in my travels. And I shall speak a good word for Georgia people.
 Your policemen there are so courteous, especially in Savannah and Brunswick. All of the Georgia men are very courteous. I will go further and say they are the most courteous men in the United States. The women, too, are nice, but a little too shy to make friends easily. But I attribute this to timidity. I use to be the same way before I got out and traveled. I do hope you will print this letter in your paper, as I would like for the people of Georgia to know how very much I have enjoyed my visits in your wonderful and beautiful state.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Every gate is thronged with suitors, All the markets overflow, I have but an angry fancy—What is it I should do?"

The notion that there are too many southerners is growing. At the Virginia Institute of Rural Affairs a few days ago Secretary Frank Lorimer, of the Population Association of America, declared that if the economic and social problems of the south are to be solved, birth control must be more widely practiced in southern families of the lower economic levels. This is a more likely solution than the migration proposal but, nature being what it is, may take a little time. In the meanwhile much can be done to make the south a place capable of supporting more people properly. There may be too many southerners under present conditions, but under better conditions this is a land blessed by Providence with enough to support many times its present population.

"What is needed," thinks Associate Editor Carroll Kilpatrick, in the Montgomery Advertiser, "is a program for raising the financial, educational and health standards of the persons in rural areas. The problem of poverty will not be solved by merely limiting the size of families." Mr. Kilpatrick subscribes to Jonathan Daniels' statement that "the southern white masses are not biologically degenerate" and that "the southern negro is not . . . incurably ignorant."

Into the editorial chair made famous by James Southall Wilson, Stringfellow Barr and Lambert Davis, goes now Lawrence Lee Jr. of Alabama. The announcement that Mr. Lee, who has been for some years a member of the faculty of the University of Virginia, has been made editor of the Virginia Quarterly Review, will please the many who look upon him as one of the nation's leading men of letters and the Review as peer to the finest periodicals of enlightened opinion in the world.

"Must Scarlett remain in the leaves of the thick volume until Shirley Temple grows up to the part?" wonders Editor Powell Chapman in the Roanoke Times. Well, they'll still be playing the part when Shirley grows up, so maybe she had better keep it in mind. The very unwillingness of Hollywood actors and actresses to try Scarlett and Rhett is comment on the way Margaret Mitchell has

KENTUCKY REQUESTED TO RETURN FUGITIVE

The state of Georgia yesterday asked Governor A. B. Chandler, of Kentucky, to return a man listed as Charlie Johnson to the Morgan county prison camp, from which he escaped April 5, 1937. Extradition papers stated Johnson is now held at Newport, Ky. An indictment set out he was charged with the murder of Lucille Rucker in Fulton county and was sentenced to a life term in September, 1934. The executive department commissioned Morgan County Warden W. H. Knight and A. H. Booth to return the fugitive.

PLANNED PROGRAM BY STATE FARMERS URGED BY BROWN

Extension Director Cites Increasing Complications Arising From Agencies.

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 10.—(AP)—How Georgia farm families can plan a program to help build a more prosperous agriculture was outlined tonight by Walter S. Brown, director of the Georgia Agriculture Extension Service.

He and other speakers at the annual Farm and Home Week urged rural leadership, education and co-operation, asked more responsibility for farm youth, and declared rural problems are becoming more complicated, thereby requiring a "planned program" more than ever.

Brown, delivering the principal address before the State Home Demonstration Council, asserted that the number of different agencies set up to aid farmers made it "essential that we work along the same general program—like building a house."

Same Objective. "Farm problems are becoming more and more complicated," he said, "and a planned program for the advancement of Georgia agriculture is more necessary than ever before. The different agencies that have been organized to serve and assist farm people are all pointing toward the same objective of increasing farm income and improving rural living conditions."

"It is necessary, however, that this work be planned and co-ordinated so that we can all work together to achieve a common objective. If we are to have a real, honest-to-goodness working program, it must be planned, developed and carried out to a very great extent by the farmers and farm women themselves."

More Responsibility. Miss Martha McAlpine, of the Montgomery (Ala.) office of the Farm Security Administration, declared farm boys and girls are not given enough responsibility in the operation of the farm.

"Too many of them," she said, "look to the city for jobs. The farm should be visualized as a mode of living happily—not merely a means of making money."

Rural people have a better chance for health than city dwellers, asserted Miss Catherine Newton, of the University of Georgia department of home economics.

Mrs. H. G. Wiley, of Cordele, president of the state council, called for rural leadership, co-operation, organization and education to "help solve the state's farm problems."

Marketing Problem. M. C. Bishop, manager of an Atlanta farmers' market, urged "consumer development" for marketing farm products.

Mrs. Margaret Blair, assistant professor of home economics at the University of Georgia, told farm wives that "it's more important to have a few carefully selected clothes... than to have a large number of expensive clothes and use poor judgment in selecting and wearing them."

Other speakers discussed problems of health, child care, safety and farm home comforts.

"Rearing children should be a pleasure instead of a headache, and parents may take their choice," Dr. Edwin R. Watson, of the child hygiene division of the State Board of Health, said.

He urged pre-natal care, both for the safety of mother and child, and discussed adequate preparation for the arrival of a baby.

Dr. S. Ross Brown, of the State Health Department, appealed

Vladivostok's Name Means 'Rule East'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(UP)—The Russian port, railroad and air base of Vladivostok, 90 miles north of the Manchoukuo-Siberia frontier where Russian and Japanese troops are battling, derives its name from a Czarist command to "rule the east," the National Geographic Society said today.

Vladivostok, dangerously near the scene of hostilities, was described as the eastern terminus of the Soviet lifeline of communications and a base for air attacks on the main islands of Japan.

The air line distance from Vladivostok, which has a population of 190,000, to Tokyo is 650 miles and to industrial Osaka 610 miles.

For education to wipe out venereal diseases, which he said "are taking a heavy toll in health and life in Georgia."

Miss Lurline Collier, state home demonstration agent, charged rural women with responsibility for developing a "better rural life in this state."

"New leaders must be discovered and developed and we must prepare to meet the common problems that are staring Georgians in the face," she said.

L. E. Sullivan, director of safety education, State Department of Public Safety, urged the State 4-H Club council members to help "build up a public sentiment that will not condone or laugh at speed and recklessness."

Young Scientist Has Windy Date With Hurricane

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 10.—(AP)—A young Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist has a date in Cuba—to meet a hurricane.

Curly-haired Delmar P. Kelly, 30, of Windsor, Conn., who never has faced a storm any worse than a New England blizzard, has had similar dates for the last two summers. But he always "got the corner." The hurricanes never showed up.

He had been commissioned by Tech to make the first studies of tropical twisters with an instrument known to science as a radio-meteorograph, which enables recording of the properties of storms by radio. Hitherto, airplanes and the familiar "weather balloons" have been the only weapons, and they are futile in a big blow like the terrors of the Caribbean.

CHARRED BODIES OF 2 FLIERS FOUND

Head Airmen Identified by Papers in Clothing.

WOODVILLE, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Deputy Sheriff Whitaker said a searching party late today found the charred bodies of two men identified as the fliers who were killed yesterday in a flight from Houma, La., to Monroe, La.

Whitaker said a searching party headed by L. C. Ventress, member of the Wilkinson County Board of Supervisors, found the bodies on the Elliston plantation 16-1/2 miles northwest of Woodville.

He said papers in their clothing identified them as H. C. Miller, plant manager of the Monroe Sand & Gravel Company, and his brother, H. S. Miller, on a visit to Louisiana from Ohio, who took off from Houma for Monroe yesterday in a rainstorm.

KNOXVILLE DELAYS DEPOSIT EXTENSION

Company Bond Deadline May Be Extended.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 10.—(AP)—City council today decided to wait until Saturday to decide on extending the time for bondholders of Tennessee Public Service Company to deposit their securities in connection with the sale of the utility to the city and TVA.

Saturday is the deadline, when 60 per cent of the bonds are scheduled to be deposited, under the deal. If sufficient securities have not been deposited then, council is expected to grant an extension.

Council authorized Mayor Mynatt to apply for a $450,000 PWA grant to be used along with money realized from a bond sale as $1,000,000 fund for extension of the utility distribution system, after the city takes it over.

MRS. CARROLL GOES TO HUSBAND'S AID

Wife, Friends Support Defendant's Denial of Murder Charge.

SOUTH PARIS, Maine, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Francis M. Carroll's wife and friends today supported before a jury trying him for murder the ousted deputy sheriff's story of his whereabouts the night Dr. James G. Littlefield was beaten and strangled.

The 43-year-old Carroll denied point by point what Paul N. Dwyer, 19, who confessed the slaying and went to prison for life, now claims to be "the true" version—that Carroll slew not only the 67-year-old physician but his wife, Lydia, 63, a killing Dwyer also had admitted.

Meanwhile, Defense Counsel Chapman moved one of the anticipated highlights of the trial when he announced he had decided against calling to the stand Barbara, pretty 18-year-old daughter of Carroll, and former sweetheart of Dwyer.

A courtroom packed to the doors heard Carroll's unruffled answers to questions, that in cross-examination by Special Prosecutor Ingalls, often were bitterly sarcastic. He was on the stand almost five hours.

On the night of October 13, when "Doctor Jim" was bludgeoned and strangled in Dwyer's Paris Hill home, Carroll insisted he first attended a Legion supper, leaving to serve a Rev. W. J. Rooks to Legion hall on his way home participated in an arrest.

(A state witness previously had placed the World War veteran outside Dwyer's home that night.)

Friend's Evidence. Morris Prince, 44, defendant left the Legion hall between 7:30 and 8 p. m., and that he saw Carroll again outside the hall between 9 and 9:30 p. m. They had arranged to play cards, he added, but Carroll's late arrival at the Prince home precluded that. However, Prince added, Carroll remained at his home until "after midnight."

Mrs. Carroll, dressed in white and speaking in a low voice, testified she did not see her husband leave the Legion supper, but found him waiting for her when it was over. Her testimony as to what happened after that coincided with Prince's.

She also corroborated her husband's story of his whereabouts the night Dwyer said Carroll strangled Mrs. Littlefield.

U. S. ARMY READY, MANEUVERS PROVE

Officers Believe Enemy Would Strike in Emergency at Southern Frontier.

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, DESOTO NATIONAL FOREST, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Official critics of the third army maneuvers, concluded here Monday, declared in a critique held last night that the United States army stood ready to meet any emergency that might arise from a foreign coalition.

The critique, held for 2,300 officers of the regular army, national guard and reserve, was addressed by the higher officers, who directed the extensive maneuvers of the past week in which nearly 30,000 officers and troops took part and successfully defended the coastal section from an "invasion" by a foreign foe.

The remarks were reassuring from a defense standpoint, but the speakers warned that the national guard lacked equipment to execute properly an emergency measure.

ACETYLENE TORCH STARTS LINER FIRE

Blaze Finally Extinguished by 150 Firemen.

MONTREAL, Aug. 10.—(UP)—Fire in the hold of the liner Andania was extinguished tonight after more than 150 firemen fought for hours to prevent its spread to other parts of the liner.

The blaze broke out when a spark from an acetylene torch with which workmen were repairing ventilator cowls, dropped into the hold.

Three firemen were injured and taken to hospitals. Damage to a large cargo of grain in the hold where the fire occurred and in an adjacent hold could not be determined until the tons of grain had cooled sufficiently for firemen to descend into the holds.

The bolt knocked him across the room, but he was unhurt.

BRITAIN, U. S. SHARE 2 PACIFIC ISLANDS

Both Claim Title to Canton, Enderbury, But Agree to Joint Control.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(UP)—A five-month diplomatic squabble between the United States and Great Britain over ownership of strategically important Canton and Enderbury islands in the south Pacific, was ended today when the two countries announced a working agreement under which they will maintain equal aviation facilities on both atolls.

Under terms of the accord the two powers will set up an administrative system to grant "equal facilities" for aviation and communication developments, a joint committee said.

Although the islands are little more than coral reefs, military strategists consider them of vital importance in Pacific defense plans because they are logical sites for refueling stations, storage plants, communication cabled and aviation bases. Moreover, they lie along the line of a projected air route from Hawaii to New Zealand, which would link with service to China.

10-TO-1 VOTE GIVEN CHACO PEACE PACT

Many of 160,000 Paraguayan Citizens Balloting Were War Veterans.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 10.—(UP)—The constitutional congress tonight ratified the Chaco peace treaty with Paraguay signed July 21 in Buenos Aires by Foreign Minister Eduardo Diez de Medina and Dr. Cecilio Baez, Paraguayan foreign minister.

The congress' action followed by only a few hours an overwhelming vote of approval for the pact in a national plebiscite in Paraguay.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Aug. 10.—(UP)—Paraguayans, anxious to end the century-old Chaco conflict that has hampered their country's progress, tonight voted overwhelmingly in favor of ratification of the peace treaty with Bolivia.

As returns from the nation-wide plebiscite were received here, a margin of nearly 10 to 1 was indicated for approval of the pact.

At 7:30 p. m., three and a half hours after the polls were closed, the ministry of interior announced the vote was 113,309 for ratification and 11,825 against.

A few isolated sections of the country still were unreported. Approximately 160,000 voters, many of them veterans of the three-year Chaco war which the peace treaty will definitely end, were registered for the plebiscite.

The result was regarded as one of the greatest mass demonstrations for peace in South American history inasmuch as defeat of the treaty might have meant resumption of the war. Hostilities in the conflict were suspended in June, 1935, after both sides had battled to a virtual stalemate.

Approval of the treaty, signed July 21 in Buenos Aires under the auspices of the Chaco peace conference, was never in doubt after the Liberal party, strongest in the country, threw its support behind the pact. The National Republican (Colorado) party opposed the accord, but its influence was negligible.

JAPANESE FEINT IN HANKOW DRIVE

Swift Attacks Hunt Weak Spot for Decisive Thrust at Capital.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 11.—(Thursday)—(AP)—Japanese troops were reported today to have struck at Chinese Yangtze river lines in swift attacks designed to find a weak spot for Japan's advance against Hankow.

One Japanese column attempted to force Chinese lines west of Kiukiang, Japanese advance base 135 miles downstream from Hankow. This detachment drove against Juichang, approximately 19 miles west of Kiukiang.

Another Japanese force landed on the southern shore of Lake Chi, north of Juichang, but was said to have been repulsed.

A third force pushed south along the 90-mile railway to Nanchang, Chinese air base.

WEDS 'WRONG' GIRL, DISCHARGED BY TVA

Committeeman Charges Employee Have Been Dismissed for Trivial Reasons.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 10.—(UP)—Representative Charles A. Wolverton, Republican, New Jersey, today reported the Tennessee Valley Authority had fired employees for "drinking out of a dipper instead of a bucket" and for marrying the wrong girl.

Wolverton made the report to the congressional committee investigating TVA. He is a member of the committee. He said several former TVA employees had complained they had been dismissed for trivial reasons.

"A former construction worker told me he was fired for drinking out of a dipper instead of out of a paper cup," Wolverton said during a committee hearing.

Another discharged TVA employee, Wolverton reported, "didn't marry a particular girl, and when he came back from his honeymoon, he found his desk out in the hall."

A large part of the committee's hearing today was concerned with labor troubles of the New Deal electric power agency.

All Is Forgiven As Blase Capital Cheers Corrigan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Douglas Corrigan got a tumultuous welcome from the national capital today—and virtual assurance that there would be no further official penalty for his "wrong way" hop to Ireland in a $900 plane.

After a roaring greeting when he arrived by airplane and a tour through streets packed with cheering spectators, the flyer visited Dennis Mulligan, director of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The 122-pound Corrigan and the 200-pound official who had suspended the Corrigan plane's license because of the unauthorized trans-Atlantic flight, emerged from the half-hour conference with broad smiles.

About 150,000 spectators lined Pennsylvania avenue and cheered Corrigan in a demonstration equalled only by the one given Lindbergh.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—In order that New Yorkers, who live in a town of virtually screenless windows, may sleep in peace and safety, the WPA here is spending $5,040,000 this year on mosquito control.

That's more than 75 cents per person for the city's 7,000,000 residents. Of the $5,000,000 allotted to the work, $3,161,986.15 already has been spent, the WPA reported today.

HOOVER SEES GAIN FOR G.O.P. IN VOTES

Former President Interprets Returns of Primaries.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Former President Hoover scanned election returns from Idaho, Ohio and Arkansas today, and observed:

"These primary returns indicate to me that more than 50 per cent of the Democrats are against the notion of rubber stamps in congress."

"The desire of independent Democrats for an independent congress, such as the constitution provides, has been in evidence in every place where there have been contests between Democrats and Republicans. I think that indicates a gain for Republican principles."

Cook Book Termed 'Intriguing' By Leading State Clubwoman

Mrs. H. B. Ritchie Looks Forward to Addition in Kitchen Library.

America's Cook Book is termed "intriguing" and "extremely helpful" by Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, recording secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, past president of the Georgia Federation and director for Georgia in the General Federation.

Enthusiastic in her comment on the book, Mrs. Ritchie declares:

"Having so recently spent a great deal of time working on and over cook books, I was greatly interested in examining the copy of America's Cook Book. It is a most attractive work, both in makeup and in the arrangement of topics.

"I am looking forward to the place it will occupy in my kitchen library. Every heading of a chapter is intriguing, and MRS. H. B. RITCHIE.

promises extremely helpful information.

"Completeness and attractiveness are the best words for describing the America's Cook

HOUSEWIFE OBTAINS COOK BOOK EASILY

Constitution Sells Fast, At-

Takes Up Offer.

"It was just about the easiest thing I ever tried," declared one successful housewife yesterday.
"I read The Constitution's offer to buy a copy of America's Cook Book for anyone obtaining two six-month subscriptions. I telephoned a few friends and within an hour I'd earned the cook book.

"I found The Constitution a very easy 'product' to sell. It is so well established and reliable, and has so many exclusive features."

America's Cook Book, now the best seller throughout the country and called "the greatest cook book ever published," cannot be given as a premium, nor can its retail price of $2.50 be reduced.

But The Constitution in its offer, agrees to purchase the book and present it to anyone obtaining the two six-month subscriptions.
The book contains more than 1,000 pages, and presents not only the cream of 800,000 recipes but full direction for operating any kitchen or dining room.

MARIETTA TO VOTE ON $100,000 BONDS

Ballot on Improvement Program Is Set for September 15.

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—
Marietta voters will go to the polls September 15—a day after the state-wide primary—to decide on the issuance of $100,000 in bonds to finance an extensive improvement program. The election call was issued today following ap-

Mayor T. M. Brumby, discussing the proposed issue, said:

1. The bond issue will not increase the present tax rate, since other bonds in similar amount have been retired. In fact, he declared, the city tax rate probably will be cut to 12 mills next year, a reduction of .5 mill.

2. The $100,000 will be matched by $90,000 from the federal government, making a total of $190,- 000 available for the building program.

The issue will make possible a comprehensive building program for the public school system, a recreation park, a public armory and the continuance of the street paving program.

Profits made by the board of lights and waterworks will pay both the principal and interest on the bonds, officials estimated.

at $205,454.

Applications for federal aid in consummating projects in nine Georgia communities were filed yesterday with the Public Works Administration, it was announced by H. T. Cole, regional PWA administrator.

The estimated total cost of construction was placed at $205,454.
Besides grants of $78,702, loans in the sum of $78,000 were asked.

Hiram requested $8,190 to aid in repairing and building a school in Paulding county at an estimated cost of $18,200. Application was received from Americus for a grant of $9,000 and a loan of $11,- 000 for remodeling the city hall and building a new jail at a cost of $20,000, while Griffin asked $4,412 to help in the construction of an abattoir to cost $9,904.

The Roanoke school district in Ben Hill county sought $9,000 to help in the construction of a $20,- 000 school building, while an amended application was received from the Griffin board of education seeking $15,975 to build a $35,000 school building at Griffin.

Aged Attorney Renews Battle To Save Trees

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—J.
E. Mozley, aged Marietta lawyer, today was prepared to renew his 17-year fight in the courts to preserve two large oak trees in front of his residence on Church street, following a resolution by city council to again condemn the trees in order to widen the street.

The litigation started 17 years ago in Cobb superior court and has twice been to the state supreme court, the second time being again remanded to the Cobb court, where Mr. Mozley was victorious.

Numerous compromise attempts have been made in the case, but L. M. Blair, city attorney, was instructed to again file a condemnation, which will be done "in a few days," the attorney indicated.

The two trees are situated on a plot of ground which city officials say projects into the street about six feet and is a dangerous traffic obstruction for the 6,000 vehicles which travel the route every day—the street being on the Dixie highway.

FEDERAL THEATER PURGE DEMANDED

Jersey Congressman Says
Reds Dominate Project.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)— Representative Thomas, Republican, New Jersey, demanded a house cleaning in WPA's federal theater project today on the ground it "is completely dominated by the Communist party."

It is used, he said, as a "patronage vehicle for Reds." He cited the case of a New York chambermaid, alleged to be a Communist. She was given a leading role in the play, he said, although she had never appeared on the legitimate stage.

He said he would ask an investigation by the house committee on un-American activities, of which he is a member.

HELP 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

To Flush out Acids and Other Poisonous Waste
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or steady passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the beginning of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

INCREASE ASKED IN COTTON QUOTA

Congressman Owen Cites Ravage to Wallace.

GRiffin, Ga., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Representative Emmett Owen, Democrat, Georgia, wired secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace today asking cotton allotments in Georgia be increased.

"After inspecting many farms in my district find that boll weevils have cut down prospects of crop," he telegraphed Wallace. "Heavy rains have increased boll weevil activity and have brought about a pitiful condition."

He also told the secretary many farmers had planted more cotton than original allotments permitted and are being instructed to plow up extra acreage. He urged farmers be allowed to market all their cotton, and added that even then the crop would be small because of weevil infestation.

ELECTION PLANNED BY NURSERYMEN

Southern Association Will Close Fortieth Convention With Balloting Today.

The Southern Nurserymen's Association, in session at the Biltmore hotel, will close its fortieth annual convention today with the election and installation of officers for the ensuing year.

Also scheduled for today is an illustrated talk by M. S. Yeomans, state entomologist, on "Seriousness of New Insect Pests in the South," and addresses by M. J. Harris, express company district manager, who will speak on "Express Rates on Nursery Shipments Are Too High," and Davenport Quarry, of Macon, whose subject will be "Unfair Trade Practices."

Featuring the meeting yesterday was an address by R. P. White, of Washington, secretary and treasurer of the national association, on "Government and Nursery Trade." The speaker claimed the nursery trade as a whole is up against a serious situation in government competition with private enterprise is unjustifiable, and the invasion in fields of nursery stock production by local state or federal government constitutes one of the greatest threats to the nursery industry today," he said.

Joel Chandler Harris Memorial Gets Oil Painting of Uncle Remus

Original Portrait of Lovable Character of Immortal "Brer Rabbit" by James Moser, Once-Famed Atlanta Artist, Hangs in Emory Library.

One of the more recent additions to the Joel Chandler Harris Memorial at Emory University is the original oil painting of "Uncle Remus," a lovable and whimsical character of the immortal "Brer Rabbit" series, which yesterday was placed on display in the Emory library by Dr. Tom H. English, professor of English.

The painting, the work of James H. Moser, once-famed Atlanta artist, is the gift of Mrs. Robert P. McLarty and Mrs. Paul M. Potter, daughters of Mrs. W. Woods White, and was presented to the university as a memorial to their mother. Subsequently, a plaque bearing the inscription, "In Memory of Mrs. W. Woods White, Presented by Her Daughters, Lula White Potter and Dodo White McLarty," will be attached to the portrait, Professor English said yesterday.

The gift is the nucleus of a collection of "Harrisiana" which at present boasts an original copy of "Uncle Remus," about 6,000 original manuscripts and thousands of letters, donated by children of the originator of old southern folklore tales.

It was painted by Moser prior to May 1880 and was used as an engraving on the first edition of "Uncle Remus," published that year by D. Appleton & Company, of New York. A facsimile also adorned the band of a popular brand of cheroots of the latter part of the last century.

The painting was later acquired by W. Woods White, prominent Atlanta businessman, who, on his death, bequeathed it, among other paintings, to his wife, Mrs. W. Woods White. Upon her death last year the painting came into possession of her daughters, who, recognizing its importance to the Harris collection, donated it to Emory.

SUIT WOULD FORCE RATE COLLECTIONS

Proceedings Charge Southeastern Fair Has Received Water Without Cost.

Mandamus proceedings to force the city of Atlanta to collect water rates on water allegedly furnished to the Southeastern Fair Association, Inc., without cost were launched yesterday in Fulton superior court.

Suit was filed by G. A. Screws, Hopkins street produce salesman, as a "citizen and taxpayer." He charged the city has furnished water to the fair association free of charge since 1918, bringing a loss of $120,000 to citizens and taxpayers of Atlanta.

The mayor and members of city council were named as defendants in the action. They were charged with a "breach of duties" in not collecting rates on the water furnished the association.

Screws' appeal to the mayor and general council May 11 to collect the rates was refused, the petition set out, with the result that "Atlanta can't operate its water system on a high standard."

The recent increase in water rates, authorized by the legislature March 23, 1932, was necessitated by refusal to collect rates on water furnished free of charge. The action alleged.

Cost per year of water furnished to the association was estimated at $6,000. The action seeks to force the city to collect the amount due within the statutory period for the water furnished to the fair association in the past.

Judge Hugh M. Dorsey signed an order directing the defendants to appear in court August 19 to show cause why the city should not proceed to collect water rates from the association.

CLEAR SKIES SEEN FOR F. D. R.'S VISITS

State in General To Enjoy Fair Weather.

Clear skies and normal temperatures will greet President Roosevelt on his visits to Athens and Barnesville today, as the state in general enjoys fair weather, the weatherman promised yesterday.

While the heavens will be partly overcast during the morning and late afternoon, the United States Weather Bureau predicted that the weather in general would be pleasant with no rain being expected.

Both at Barnesville and Athens it is expected to be slightly warmer than elsewhere in the state but the difference will not be appreciable, George W. Mindling, meteorologist, said.

Extremes at Atlanta are expected to range between 72 and degrees, the weatherman said, with cooling breezes and clouded skies relieving the midday.

Building costs this year above 1937 average levels in localities.

WPA Labor Will Start Grading Of Marietta Road Within 30 Days

Using WPA labor for the first time on state highways, Chairman W. L. Miller, of the State Highway Board, yesterday announced that grading of the unpaved section of the new Atlanta-Marietta highway will be started within 30 days.

Miller said he did not believe it possible to start paving of the link this year.

The board chairman made the commitment on the highway to a delegation of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, headed by Fain Peak, executive secretary.

Miller explained the board has just completed arrangements with Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state WPA administrator, to use WPA labor on a number of highway projects.

"The first of these will be the grading of the unpaved section of the new road to Marietta," the board chairman told the Jaycee delegation. "A project is now being worked up in our engineering department and will be submitted to Miss Shepperson within a short time."

Peak said his committee would take the matter over with Governor Rivers later.

Health and Figure Authority Tells How to Trade Angles for Curves

Virginia Grey, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, demonstrates the correct pose to assume at the telephone. With pencil in hand, she is ready for any possible notes, the telephone mouth-piece is in correct position for voice receptivity, and the lines of the body are correctly graceful.

The Thin Girl Program Continues, With Formula for Developing Curves

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you are one of the thin girls who would gladly trade angles for curves, you will be keenly interested in the measures which develop the chest and build a firm, high bust contour.

Ann Delafield, who has been notably successful in converting stringlines into lovely streamlines, says the answer to the flat-chested girl's problem is in posture correction, stressing exercise for the pectoral muscles, and in the addition of milk to the diet.

First of all an exercise like nothing you have ever seen before for the development of those pectoral muscles and the improvement of your posture:

Stand with the back against the wall, heels about three inches from the wall and feet six inches apart with toes pointing straight ahead. Have the arms straight and slightly out from the sides, palms turned outward, and thumbs resting against the wall.

When you have assumed the correct position, lean against the wall, and, keeping the feet flat on the floor, bend the knees. Now, without moving the feet, turn the knees outward—away from each other—and dig the small of the back into the wall. Keep digging the small of the back into the wall as you lift the chest as high as possible, relax the shoulders back and down, and pull the chin in close against the throat in an effort to press the nape of the neck flat against the wall. Read the directions for this exercise before you try it. Every detail is important and each step has a definite purpose.

As Miss Delafield analyzes this posture corrective for you, you can appreciate how thoroughgoing it is. Digging the small of the back into the wall corrects sway back and strengthens the tummy muscles. Lifting the chest and relaxing the shoulders back and down strengthens the pectoral muscles, raising the bust. Turning the knees out counteracts the tendency to knock knees and holding the feet in place during the exercise strengthens the arches. Pulling the chin in helps to beautify the head carriage.

After you have completed the exercise, hold the position for an entire minute, breathing naturally. Relax and repeat 10 times. This exercise will take just 10 minutes of your time and it has no equal for figure improvement.

Your daily diet should be supplemented by two quarts of milk and one concentrated Vitamin A and D capsule. The action of the milk and the vitamins together seems to have a magic effect. In order to drink the two quarts of milk, you can take at least one glass with each meal and one glass between each meal and before retiring, taking large-size glasses between meals.

You may think all this too much bother . . . and if you do, you cannot be very serious about wanting a beautiful figure.

Every thin girl should read and clip the articles given yesterday and today on weight gaining for beauty. Besides the articles you may like to send for two leaflets, "V-eight-Gaining Menus" and "Posture Makes the Figure." Address your letter to Ida Jean Kain, care The Atlanta Constitution, and enclose a large return envelope.

Gable Will Play Opposite Hedy Lamarr

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 10.—Clark Gable has stated his willingness to make a picture with Hedy Lamarr—which is a big break—for both of them. The glamorous Lamarr, who, without question or doubt, is the most beautiful girl in pictures, will probably appear with Clark in "New Orleans," Metro's lavish portrayal of the colorful gambling era in that city. This is the film, by the way, in which it was recently rumored Mae West would appear. I understand that Mr. Gable couldn't quite see himself teamed with La West.

"Boy Meets Girl," currently starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, is to have a sequel, "Boy Meets Sally." Cagney and O'Brien will again appear as the two screw writers. Marie Wilson, the title waitress-mother in the first film, will now be the dumb secretary of the writing pair, Sally, the new heroine, is the daughter of a studio cop and played by Priscilla Lane, with Jeffrey Lynn as the son of the producer, who, of course, marries Sally. Miss Lane and Mr. Lynn, incidentally, give excellent performances in the soon-to-be-released "Four Daughters," as does John (Jules) Garfield, who has just been added to the "Gay Nineties" cast.

After all that hullabaloo of Mitzi Green's grown-up return to picture work, she has settled her contract with RKO-Radio, without making a single picture. If you remember, Mitzi came to Hollywood a few months ago for the lead in "The Mad Miss Manton" and "Fiddlers' Bits." Barbara Stanwick took over the first. The latter was dropped. Mitzi received nothing for the time wasted in Hollywood—merely a single ticket to and from New York, where she will soon appear in a play.

William Powell and ex-Wife Carole Lombard get together under Myron Selznick's profit-sharing plan in a picture to be directed by Ernst Lubitsch, but not until Bill has made another "Thin Man." . . . Constance Bennett shares top billing with Vincent Price in Universal's "Service de Lux," which sounds like a good title for Connie. . . . Producer Al Lewin leaves next month for a four-month vacation in Europe.

On his return to Hollywood and Paramount, he will supervise four pictures—"Knights of the Round Table," "Gettysburg," scripted by Clifford Odets and with a $1,000,000 budget, "The Amazing Marriage," by Rebecca West, and "Two Bad Hats," starring Carole Lombard. . . . Sally Rand plays opposite George Jessel in "20,000 Witnesses." Before this, Sally stars in "Murder on Sunset Boulevard."

Joe Mankiewicz is preparing the film life story of Benedict Arnold from the Frank Hough book, "Renown."

Adolphe Menjou stars in "King of the Turf" for the Edward Small company. . . . Alice Faye goes back to her singing in Irving Berlin's "The Bowery Nightingale."

Which reminds me, Spencer Tracy has been lent to Twentieth Century-Fox to play opposite Alice in "Dance Hall."

Certain Amount Coughing Beneficial for Two Reasons

By Dr. William Brady.

One subject to chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis or emphysema should never forget that a certain amount of coughing is beneficial for two reasons; first, it improves circulation in abdomen and thorax; second, it is necessary to aid expectoration or drainage from the breathing passages. It is a serious error, therefore, to take or do anything to check cough, unless under the immediate care of the physician.

In some cases of chronic winter cough attended with wheezing small daily doses of iodid or iodine somewhat larger than the dose in the iodine ration are helpful. In all cases of chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis or emphysema, as well as bronchial or spasmodic asthma, the patient should have a regular iodine ration, in my judgment. The attending physician should prescribe the iodid or iodine if more than the amount in the iodine ration is to be taken.

The real trouble in some cases purporting to be chronic bronchitis or recurring winter cough, is neglected chronic sinusitis. Some astonishing cures are obtained by the discovery of underlying sinus infection and its drainage.

Two or three drops of purified oil of turpentine (not the crude spirits of turpentine intended for industrial use) on a little sugar or in capsule, twice daily, after food, is an old and useful remedy in many cases of chronic cough. The turpentine derivative called terpin hydrate is perhaps easier to take—I do not know whether it is as efficient medicinally—may be taken instead, in dose of two or three grains in capsule or tablet, after food, for many months.

In any chronic cough with expectoration the patient should assume an inverted position for five minutes every morning. Lie prone across bed with your forearms resting on the floor. This is especially helpful in bronchiectasis (dilation or ballooning of bronchi) and emphysema (ballooning of air-cells in lungs).

Children or adults disturbed by coughing on going to bed will get much relief from dropping in each nostril two or three drops of bland oil (vegetable oil, not mineral oil) containing vitamin D.

Any means of maintaining a fair degree of humidity in the air, by evaporating water, especially during the season when artificial heating is necessary, tends to soothe or rather to prevent undue irritation of the breathing passages and should be used for victims of chronic cough or wheeze.

In my judgment infant, child or adult with any chronic respiratory trouble should receive an optimal daily ration of vitamin D, and the less the patient is exposed to sunshine the greater his need for vitamin D internally. I believe from 3,000 to 6,000 units daily is an optimal ration of vitamin D for a child; perhaps an adult requires a little less.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

It Will Be Clear Now.

You are not very clear about nasal drops or sprays. In one place you do not recommend the oily kind, and in another you suggest one with a bland oil base. (H.F.H.)

Answer—I do not recommend nose drops, sprays or inhalants made with a mineral oil base, for mineral oil (liquid petrolatum) is a foreign substance and cannot be absorbed by mucous membranes. I do recommend the use of nose drops or inhalant made with a vegetable oil base, as vegetable oil is food and can be absorbed by mucous membranes and can never accumulate anywhere in the body to cause trouble.

X-Ray for Enlarged Tonsils.

From experience with two children I believe X-ray treatment preferably to diathermy for enlarged tonsils. One received about eight X-ray treatments, without any discomfort, and no trouble since. The other had diathermy treatment, which proved satisfactory in the end, yet entailed more than a dozen visits to the doctor's office and some sore throat after the first few treatments. (Mrs. T. H. A.)

Answer—Thank you. The X-ray treatment is sometimes quite satisfactory, of course, in the hands of a physician experienced in X-ray work.

Bed Wetting.

Our six-year-old son still wets the bed. Except for a nervous temperament he seems healthy enough. (W. L. S.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for monograph on Correction of Bed Wetting Habit.

Nan Practices to Make Self The Center of Entertainment

Nan's going to fascinate in her role of fortune-teller. Let's eavesdrop as she practices on herself.

"Ah! a dark young man will come into my life," she says gaily—as she spots the Jack of Spades next to her name card, the Queen of Hearts. Nan's blue eyes and brown hair make her a "Heart."

Quickly, she sizes up the other cards—for she finds it easy to get their meanings down pat.

"Will the start of the romance be the bid to lunch promised by that Two of Clubs? Certainly I'll get engaged soon, that Three of Hearts says. Perhaps he'll propose in front of the Five of Spades stands for."

"Anyway, the Nine of Hearts says I'll get my wish; the Six of Diamonds, I'll find money."

There—that's the lively kind of fortune the party crowd goes for. A snap to do it—to learn other kinds of fortunes, too.

In teacup fortunes, leaves at the left of the handle speak of past events. A parrot-shaped group of leaves says there's been gossip about you; a lamb, you've been carrying on a flirtation.

At the right of the cup handle, tea leaves speak of present and future. A parrot foretells a sudden marriage, a basket promises a gift.

Try reading "Secrets of Nature," too. Fully rules the person with one lip larger than the other, twinkling eyes betray a love of luxury.

Our 40-page booklet, "Let Me Tell Your Fortune," gives the meaning of each card in the deck. How to read tea leaves, handwriting, numbers, dreams. Fortune games for parties. A grand way to have more fun, get more ideas.

Send 15c for our booklet, LET ME TELL YOUR FORTUNE, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

To Papa's Pet, Papa Is Perfect

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

My husband's father, a widower, has a nice amount of property which he divided evenly among his five children, with the understanding that they care for him for the rest of his days. After a week's visit to each of them he lighted on us to live the year round. He's not an old man and could easily work, which would make him happier, as well as us, but he prefers to loaf and take it easy. My husband is the youngest and thinks his father is perfect. Consequently his father tells us what to do and how, criticizes us if we have company and expects us to live as he and his wife lived; penuriously. I'm nearly insane at the thought of having him on us the rest of our days. Please tell me how to get rid of him and have a peaceful home life once again.

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

Answer: Sister, I'm afraid you are looking a gift horse in the face. Nobody blames you for disliking to have the old gentleman in your home the year round and it isn't fair for the sisters and brothers to sidestep their responsibility to entertain him. On the other hand, if you married papa's pet and the pet thinks papa is perfect and the two of you are living partially, at least, on papa's bounty, why would you do but make the best of it?

There's no reason why you shouldn't send out an SOS to the in-law brothers and sisters asking them to help you out by inviting the old gentleman to visit them at least once a year. If they don't answer, you'll have to work through your husband who is the key man in the situation.

In the meantime can't you have a heart for a fond and foolish father who gave to his children all he had and took in return promise of perpetual care? (Of course he should have known that when he no longer was anything to give he would not be welcome in any home that his money had built.) You should also have a thought for the way you would treat him if you were looking forward to the inheritance he had to leave.

Why would you fall over yourself trying to please him?

There's scant chance of your getting rid of the old gentleman, but if you mistreat him you'll lose the love and respect of your husband. So remember that the peaceful home life you want depends entirely on your attitude to the inconvenience and annoyance of having him around. He's too old to mend his ways. Moreover he thinks he's paid for his seat and he sees no reason why he should not keep it. Patently your husband is of the same mind.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Save Clippings In Scrapbook Library

By Elizabeth Boykin.

Do you hoard? We do, and sometimes when we view the attic with considerable alarm we rather envy those women who are completely hard-boiled about old clippings—bits of string and scraps of material and can throw them away without suffering from the sure conviction that some day just those things will be a necessity.

The only trouble with saving old clippings, for example, is that you save and save, get disgusted and have a general throw-away. And then, the very next day, find yourself in dire need of some item that you threw away the day before.

Sitting on the Floor.

The clipping complaint can be avoided by a lady with her own library of scrapbooks that are fun to keep and "left" beyond measure. Almost every home-maker keeps a recipe book. Why not carry the same zeal for saving over to room recipes, articles on how-to-do's, pictures of flower arrangements, etc. Devote one evening a month to sorting your clipping—going over last month's supply for possible hints and suggestions. Perhaps it's a page suggesting summer slip covers, or an article on how to wash hand-knit woollens, or just a general description of kitchen planning. Use a looseleaf scrapbook and keep a careful index. Choose an evening for your cutouts when you won't be disturbed and can really spread out—the floor is a grand place to sit, with everything sprawled about you, a paste pot at your elbow and a waste basket handy for snips of paper.

Mary K. is saving reproductions of old masters and modern paintings—"Young Richard isn't going to find his mother an ignoramus when he starts studying art in school," she says.

Marking Time.

And then there's Anna, our bride-friend—married this June and marking time in a three-room apartment, but with eyes glued on that future home. She has already started a library all her own, filling it with ideas for closets, for laundry arrangements, for tricky ideas that one day will make her the delight of some harassed architect. For she'll be one client who has a real notion of what she wants but can be definite, for she can show him a plan or a picture of just what she wants.

Chances are that some of the most enjoyable reading you'll ever do is in a book that you've "made" yourself.

MYDAY: Useful Private Citizen Renders Greatest Service

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—A most unusual letter came this morning from a lady who suggests that, of course, it is bad precedent to elect the same man to the presidency for a third term, but that one can achieve the same results by electing his wife.

This seems to me rather beating the devil around the bush. However, the lady suggests solemnly that she will start an organization to promote my election in 1940 and she assumed that I will have the help of both my husband and my oldest son.

She kindly adds that if for any reason I do not feel that I can sacrifice myself for the good of the people of the country, I can state my distaste for this sacrifice in the agony column of her local newspaper, and she will respect my wishes. I would like to suggest that it is a mistake: ever to buy a pig in a poke.

I am not fond of being a sacrificial lamb, for I rarely like martyrs, and I cannot bring myself to believe that there is any service beyond that of being a useful private citizen as possible, which I can render my country.

Every morning starts with fog and every afternoon seems to end with a violent thunderstorm. My aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. David Gray, arrived yesterday afternoon for a visit, just in time for all of us to go in swimming before the heavens opened in spite of drops of rain and thunder and, finally, lightning, we enjoyed ourselves and cooled off, getting in before the worst of the storm broke.

I always expect the lights to go out and the telephone to cease functioning during these storms, but since Mrs. Gray and I were both brought up on the Hudson river, I felt nothing that a thunderstorm could do would disturb her. However, a dinner guest Mr. Lewis Lawes, warden of Sing Sing prison, was somewhat delayed, for he encountered the storm as he drove up, and had to stop while trees were removed from the road. We all had a pleasant and amusing evening, for the group was one in which stories of personal experiences were easily told and the experiences, particularly those the gentlemen told, were varied and interesting. Whatever harm the storm did, it certainly has left us cooler and we are all rejoicing in the change of weather.

I am particularly glad of this change, for Miss Jane Ellis is bringing Mrs. Kyllikki Pohjala, from Finland, to lunch today, and I realize that her country has a cooler climate than we have been indulging in lately. She will spend a pleasant time with us, she does not have to keep mopping her face and drinking quart after quart of ice water, which is what the greater majority of foreigners feel they must do when they come to this country.

I also have Mrs. Eliza Keates Young, my neighbor from across the river, who is a member of the Home Bureau, and very active in farm women's organizations in this state, coming to us today. I think she will have a great interest in whatever Miss Pohjala has to tell us, for there is a growing interest in the farm group in this country in learning all they can about co-operatives. The Scandinavian countries are, of course, far more advanced than we are along these lines.

Bridge Expert Gives Points On Double Entry Squeeze

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Two of declarer's problems in developing a single two-unit squeeze are somewhat lessened when one of his "threat" suits contains more than two cards.

(1) A dummy with a long squeeze suit may be divided between hands of declarer and dummy, instead of being restricted to one hand, as in other types of single squeezes.

(2) The squeeze lead may be made from either hand, provided entries are available to both hands—a distinct advantage over the ordinary type single squeeze.

For example, (2) East discards his dummy king, declarer cashes his heart king and then enters dummy to make the diamond queen and heart ace.

If East discards his heart after dummy discards the heart five, declarer again enters dummy with the heart 3, plays diamond ace and with the heart 5* return to South's hand by overtaking the 10 with South's king cashing the heart 7 for the final trick.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you to dance and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they get to parties they want girls who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system, remember for 3 generations one woman has told men how to get "smiling" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical strength and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

Remember! Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Crackers Execute Triple Play in Beating Smokies Again, 9-6

First-Round Matches in Two-Club Meet Will End Today

All in the GAME
by Jack Troy

It is highly possible that when the Southern league season ends, the second division will be made up entirely of Tennessee baseball teams.

And it is not entirely remote, either, the possibility that the mighty powerhouse outfit for which so much was claimed before the season opened will be in last place.

I mean Chattanooga. The mighty have fallen steadily until, today, they are thankful for the fact that Knoxville has a fairly safe hold on the cellar position.

And yet it isn't impossible for the Smokies to arise from the cellar if the Lookouts continue to slip. The Smokies actually have better hitting than Chattanooga. They just haven't had the pitching.

The funny thing about the present situation is that New Orleans, Little Rock and Birmingham may follow Atlanta in the first division, with Nashville, Memphis, Chattanooga and Knoxville relegated to the second division.

There is going to be a wild-eyed scramble for the three places in the first division. The Crackers are, of course, virtually assured of their third pennant in four years.

But there is no wide difference in the standings from second place to seventh. The teams are closely bunched.

Birmingham, leading team in hitting and fielding, deserves a place in the Shaughnessy play-off. As does Little Rock, the defending champion, and New Orleans.

If it works out this way, there will be, for the first time probably in history, the unusual sight of all four Tennessee entries on the other side of the tracks, so to speak.

REESE LEADING LEAGUE.

Well, well! Look who's leading the Southern league in hitting now. It's none other than Andy Reese, who has been around in the Southern association as long as any other player and longer than most.

It's a strange year, however, when a player is able to have only a .339 average and top all the others in batting.

Usually, the top average at this time is closer to .390. Which goes to show just what the pitchers are doing this season. It's really a pitcher's league.

There aren't so many outstanding pitchers, but there are a great number of better than average moundmen.

Another thing, there aren't as many top-notch hitters. It all has resulted in a red-hot race and only the surge of the Crackers has taken some of the edge off the actual pennant race.

The other clubs remain bunched in the battle for first-division berths.

WHERE WAS HE?

There was an interesting dispatch from Lincoln, Neb., in the news yesterday. It concerned the complaint of L. E. Gunderson, finance secretary and a member of the athletic board at the University of Nebraska. He criticized University of Alabama athletic department officials for alleged offers of "athletic scholarships" to prominent former Lincoln High students.

At the very end of the story there was this sentence—

"Major L. M. (Biff) Jones, Husker athletic director and football coach, is out of the city."

Now, where was Major Jones? If the story about Alabama trying to get a few Lincoln "honorary students" is true, it stands to reason that Major Biff Jones, who knows his way around the south rather well, may be off on that sort of mission himself.

There's a story going the rounds these days that a certain southern college has invaded Tuscaloosa High school, in the same town where the University of Alabama is located, and persuaded three crack football players to matriculate at the certain southern college this fall.

But Alabama isn't kicking about it. In fact, I don't know but what a boy who is a good hand at totting a football or blasting holes in a line is entitled to attend whatever school he chooses.

Naturally the complaint of Gunderson would cause one to think that Nebraska must be a "simon pure" school. Nebraska doesn't try to lure any outside athletes, Gunderson's complaint would lead you to believe.

But that is, of course, as illogical as Corrigan's statements about his wrong-way flight. Leave it to Biff Jones. He'll get athletes—and he won't care, particularly, where he gets them, or from what section, or whose toes he might step on.

GIANTS ARE FADING.

It looks like they're going to break it up. That is, the annual Subway World Series.

Colonel Bill Terry's Giants are fading fast and the Pittsburgh Pirates show no tendency of relinquishing their rather wide lead.

The collapse of the Giants is being hailed with a sort of fiendish delight by the baseball writers. Terry always has adopted the attitude that he is bigger or better than the boys who write about the game and they are glad to see him in his present plight.

Those in New York are sharpening their pencils and oiling their typewriters preparatory to letting the Colonel have it when the Pirates clinch the pennant.

Over in the junior circuit, the Yankees still hold the whip hand. They're virtually certain to be in the big series again.

Will Harridge had the best idea about the Yankee supremacy. He said: "No team is a menace to baseball that annually draws a million people on the road and a million people at home."

What the writers would like to see, however, is for the Pirates to get in another series with the Yankees and beat them. The last time they lost four straight.

If the Pirates could win, the writers would feel their revenge as far as Terry is concerned would be complete.

It is not such a good year for Terry. Southern league fans will recall he went out of his way to try to tell the Southern league how to run its business. He personally indorsed and backed Frank Longinotti, of Memphis, for the Southern league presidency. Longinotti did not get a single vote.

THAT SETTLES IT.

Now that the Crackers have turned to triple plays to get their pitchers out of trouble, it is about time to call the dogs in the Southern league race.

The wire reports said the triple play the Crackers turned in yesterday at Knoxville—their first in many years—was a nifty. And it was unusual, too, in that the play went from center field to home plate and back to third base.

Knoxville had runners on second and third. Chatham's throw to Bolling after catching a fly nipped the runner at the plate and Manager Paul Richards whipped the ball back to Johnny Hill to catch the runner trying to advance from second.

What will the Crackers do next—besides clinch their third pennant in four years?

RIDDICK BEATS NOWELL, 2 TO 1; EDWARDS WINS

Luke Barnes Cops; Constitution Meet Praised by Officials, Players.

By ROY WHITE.

First-round matches in The Constitution's novel two-club tournament at Piedmont Park will be completed this afternoon. Players failing to communicate with each other will be defaulted, as the second round will start Friday and end Sunday afternoon.

All players defaulting in the first round will be given another opportunity as the winners and losers in the six divisions will form flights after today's play.

Luke Barnes, the medalist; Charlie Edwards, runner-up, and Sam Riddick, another leader, have won their first-round matches. Luke beat Charlie Barnes, 3-1; Edwards eliminated Fain Peek, and Riddick defeated Bob Nowell, of Monroe, 2-1.

The Riddick-Nowell match was one of the features of the championship division. Nowell sank a chip shot on the ninth green for an eagle and squared the match. Riddick had a "gimmie" birdie, but it was just one stroke too many. The Piedmont Park player ran a couple of those "gimmies" on into the cup on the back nine for a 2-1 victory.

Arthur Mobley and John Preston, two other members of the Monroe team, also ran into "hot" rocks and were sent to the lower flights.

L. R. Hunter, a former official of the Atlanta Golf Association, was high in his praise of The Constitution's novel tourney. "It's a great thing, a lot of fun and should stimulate interest in golf," Hunter was a member of Mike Benton's Southeastern Fair team.

Chess Lagomarsino, of the Davison-Paxon team, said: "I like your two-club tourney. It's a fine thing for deviation from the regular play and has proven a lot of fun for us all."

McLIN ANNEXES HAMBLETONIAN

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 10.—(AP) Lawrence B. Sheppard proved the wisdom of his $20,000 investment today when McLin trotted to a straight heat victory in Hambletonian blue ribbon event of light harness racing.

At home on Good Time park's triangular track, where he received his preparation for trotting's richest race, the bay son of Mr. McElwyn-Ethelinda turned back the bid of nine other high-ranking 3-year-olds, including Long Key, the heavily-played favorite, owned by E. J. Merkle, of Columbus, Ohio.

Sheppard, looking for a colt to follow in the footsteps of his Hambletonian winners from his Hanover (Pa.) shoe farms, Hanover's Bertha and Shirley Hanover, offered Cane and Cox $20,000 for the horse. The offer was accepted. Today McLin earned nearly all that back for the winner's share of the $38,692 amounted to $19,944.30.

The crowd of more than 40,000, enjoying the sport under perfect weather conditions, made Long Key the even money favorite and established McLin the second choice at 3 to 1. But when it came to racing, the favorite faded badly while Henry Thomas drove McLin home in 2:02 1-4 in the first heat and 2:02 3-4 in the second.

MONROE'S TEAM --- AND CHIEF SUPPORTER --- IN 2-CLUB MEET

CAROLINA TEAM NIPS LOUISVILLE

Carolina's junior Davis cup squad opened the southeastern four-day round robin tournament yesterday at the Northside courts with an impressive 8-to-1 victory over Louisville.

Dropping only one singles match and making a clean sweep in the doubles, the Carolina team established itself as an early favorite.

Today at 10 o'clock they battle a picked squad of young Atlanta stars in what promises to be the feature match of the round robin play. At 2 o'clock the Louisville netmen will meet a strong entry from Nashville.

Boasting No. 1 stars from three South Carolina colleges and one first ranking player from Augusta Junior College, the Carolina squad had little trouble. In the feature singles match Lykes Boykin, Presbyterian star, bested Gene Bowler, 9-7, 6-2.

Jim Aiken, No. 1 on Furman's net team, downed Carl Hoppe with ease, 6-1, 6-2. Another Carolina star with an easy match was Heyward Belsler who trounced Ernest Nuttycombe, 6-1, 6-0. Chester Ward, from Spartanburg, took Hyman Gumer, 6-1, 6-2.

Only one match was the Louisville team able to salvage. It was Jack Byrd's three-set victory over Bob Harper, who hails from Waycross, but who attends school in South Carolina. The score was 2-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Other results: Singles: Frank Robinson, Augusta, Ga., defeated Jack Barnett, 2-6, 6-3; Chester Ward, Spartanburg, S. C., defeated Hyman Gumer, Louisville, 6-2, 6-0; Lykes Boykin, Presbyterian, defeated Hoppe and Nuttycombe, 6-1, 6-0; Belsler and Robinson, Carolina, defeated Bowler and Byrd, Louisville, 6-4, 6-1; Aiken and Ward, Carolina, defeated Barnett and Gumer, Louisville, 6-4, 6-1.

Lightweight Title Bout Is Postponed a Week

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(UP)—The lightweight championship fight between Lou Ambers and Henry Armstrong was postponed tonight because of rain and will be held next Wednesday in Madison Square Garden.

The small crowd of not more than 5,000 fans booed the postponement announcement lustily. The customers wanted the fight to go on tonight despite the rain. Most of the ringsters already had scurried back into the sheltered grandstands and they were ready for entertainment.

Promoter Jacobs is confident that the shift indoors will result in a much larger crowd and gate than the outdoor bout would have drawn tonight. The postponement will give him another week for publicity to steam up interest in the fight which has been "dead" up to this time.

Ambers, lightweight champion, and Armstrong, featherweight and welterweight king, will return tomorrow for their respective training camps at Summit, N. J., and Pompano Lakes, N. J. Ambers is expected to be affected more by the delay than the challenger. Ambers scaled 135 pounds, exactly the lightweight limit, at today's weighing-in, and he appeared more nervous and on edge than before any previous fight.

125 Star Swimmers To Vie at Venetian

Prince Nufer Among Entrants in Georgia, Southern Championships Starting Friday.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

More than 125 crack southern swimmers from over 30 cities will compete in the Georgia State and Southern Open Swimming and Diving Meet which will be held at the Venetian Country Club on Scott boulevard in Atlanta on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week.

This meet, sponsored for the second straight year by the Venetian Country Club will number among its entrants practically all of the swimmers and divers who were in the events last year, many of which were so closely contested that several judges and stop watches were required to determine the winners.

Among the entrants in the men's 100-yard breaststroke event will be Gene Halpern from Montgomery, Ala., who last year broke the world's record for this event. He also won the southeastern, the midwest, eastern and middle Atlantic championships in this, his specialty event, the only one in which he will be entered. He employs the butterfly stroke, one which is very pleasing to watch and which has been legal only for the past two years.

MISS NUFER COMING.

Little Prince Nufer, beautiful and little 15-year-old 1938 national women's junior medley champion, is expected to be the sensation of the meet. This spectacular little girl has set several records in the Georgia state, middle Atlantic, and south Atlantic meets already this summer, chief among her conquests being her winning of A. A. U. championships in freestyle, backstroke and medley swims at various distances. She will be entered in some of the senior as well as junior events.

Another formidable entrant is Knoxville's Reba Morton, who is the present southeastern and middle Atlantic freestyle and medley swimming champion. In the southeastern this year, she set the present record of one minute and five seconds for the 100-yards freestyle event.

JACKSONVILLE BEAUTY.

Miss Nadine Scarborough, a Jacksonville, Fla., mermaid, who has been voted the most beautiful entrant in several swim meets this year, is also a fine swimmer as her championships attained in the southern, southeastern and Georgia state meets will attest. She is expected to give all entrants in her specialties a run for their money.

Pitted against these champions and holders of records will be Margaret Richards, Atlanta's best girl swimmer, holder of southern and southeastern records herself, Betty Rhinearsen, of Athens, Ga., who placed second to and practically in a dead heat with Reba Morton when she set her southeastern record this year. Carolyn Perritt from Tarboro, N. C., who holds several A. A. U. records has also consented to compete.

Many others of lesser reputation but good competitors in their own right will be in the big event to try to upset the many stars. Judging from the high caliber of the entrants, the meet should produce some exciting and close finishes, and should prove a huge success.

LaGrange Boy Signs With Montgomery 9

AUBURN, Ala., Aug. 10.—Norman Whitten, Auburn's catcher and ace hitter, today signed a contract to play with the Montgomery Bombers of the Southeastern league.

He left immediately to join the Bombers on the road.

The LaGrange, Ga., boy has been performing splendidly this summer with the Pepperell Mill club, of the Chattahoochee Valley league. He led Auburn hitters last spring with a .413 average, a record here over a decade.

'One-Stroke Jinx' Trails Pete Barnes

Pete Barnes has a one-stroke jinx following him.

Competing in both the city and state amateur tournaments, Pete has failed by one stroke for seven straight years to make either championship division.

Two years ago, Pete lost on the Capital City course in the fourth extra-hole playoff, in the Georgia amateur.

Wednesday he lost again on the same course on the first hole, in the city amateur.

"I will have to pick up a stroke somewhere, or quit the two big tournaments," he said Wednesday night. "It's tough to be one stroke away seven straight years."

BECKMAN FAILS TO FINISH; WINS 16TH OF SEASON

Triple Play Started by Chatham With 4 Men Handling Ball.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 10. Atlanta Crackers made it three in a row over the lowly Smokies here today, 9 to 6, in a listless game where the only highlight was a triple play by the visitors.

The three-way killing came in the fifth and four Crackers died the ball. It resulted from a fly to center with men on second and third. Both clubs collected 13 hits, but Atlanta was out in front all the way.

Richards opened the second with a double and completed the circuit when Chatham hit for the same distance. With the bases full Mailho flied to left, Chatham scoring after the catch.

Hill led off in the third with a triple. He was caught at the plate on Richard's grounder to short.

Singles by Tom Hefay and Jordan and an outfield fly gave Knoxville one in the third.

Peters hit his second home run of the series in the fourth. He cleared the scoreboard in left. The Atlanta total mounted to four in the fifth, when Mauldin doubled and tallied on Rose's single.

Atlanta pulled a triple play in the fifth. Beckman singled, Tom Hefay doubled, Jordan flied to center and Beckman failed to tag up at third; Hefay ran down on where a relay from Chatham to Bolling to Richards nailed him. The manager then pegged to Hill and Hefay was tagged out a third.

A walk, Mailho's double, Mauldin's single and a muffed fly by Bud Hefay produced two Crackers runs in the sixth. Richmond's error paved the way for the seventh. Atlanta tally in the seventh.

Warren's home run with Bud Hefay on got two for the Smokies in the seventh. In the same frame Hefay tripled and scored on Jordan's single.

Atlanta added two in the eighth and the Smokies rallied in the ninth, Durham relieving Beckman with one out, one run in and the bases full. Powers grounded to Mauldin, whose throw to second was too late to force Vannoy's Jordan scoring. That was all the damage.

Although Bobby Durham came in to pitch in the ninth, Beckman received credit for the 16th victory. He is a former Smokie.

The Ballard Family Chides Dodo Over Her Infatuation for Charlie Sallock

By KATHLEEN NORRIS.

INSTALLMENT XX.

"He is. The fact that he hasn't any particular ambition to succeed as other men do, isn't so serious. Perhaps we Americans make it more important than it is."

When the time came for Archie to go to Scotland to keep his promise to his cousin Jean, he was frankly reluctant. He took Lissy's father into his confidence.

"The awkward thing is that I simply don't feel I can go. I—you have no idea how I feel about Felicity. I cannot go on with any—any other arrangement."

"H'm!" Lissy's father said doubtfully. "It is expected of you, of course. That is too bad."

For they all had come somehow to like Archie in spite of his handsome young pomposity and his stupid management of his affairs of the heart. He was so determined in his helplessness to be a gentleman through it all and to do his duty by the family and the Ross firm that first Lissy and then the others forgave him past defections, and came to see that once Archie's loyalty was engaged it was established for life. The awkwardness of the deferred marriage and broken engagement had all come about because Archie never really had included Lissy among his obligations; she was included now, and the situation, infinitely entangled, was a happier one for her than even the first days of her engagement had been.

Or if not exactly happier, it was at least more exciting; less certain in one way, more certain in another. Lissy knew that she loved Archie now, loved him with all her heart, and Archie's protestations and Archie's admiration were infinitely more definite than they

It was finally decided that the only honest thing to do was for Archie to take the trip as planned to Scotland, see his cousin, and have a talk with her. Jean was a sensible girl, she would understand. Archie would tell her frankly that his old love for Felicity Ballard had returned, against his will even, and ask her to set him free from his promise, and to use her influence with his uncle to let the business arrangements stand.

Solemnly, tearfully indeed, he and Felicity parted. He would be back in late March, and a year after it had been originally planned their marriage would quietly take place—this time in the old farmhouse. "For this is my home," Archie said, "and you are all my people. I never have been so happy as I have been on these Sundays; this is the way I like to live, this is the way every one ought to live!"

Lissy was very pensive for several days after he went away, but she was not unhappy. A grave sense of dignity marked her manner.

"We have found each other again," she said. "There will be no more misunderstandings now." "I think this little time of trial has developed both their natures," Sally said. "We never knew what a really fine fellow Archie was before, and Lissy has been superb through it all. Well, Dodo, you and I do left here alone without the girls!"

Dodo would smile at this sort of thing mysteriously; she was a silent little creature; always happiest when close to one of the others, following Joyce's confident directions, listening to what Lissy or her mother or Ben said. Joyce reasoned with her on the subject of Charlie Sallock.

"Don't let yourself get to liking him, Dodo."

"I won't, of course!" Dodo answered. "But why not?"

"Why not?" Joyce echoed. "Well, because his, and Paul's, a regular small-town family. His mother has freckled arms and red hair and takes prizes for pickles at county fairs. His father has a feed-store, and Marie-Therese is going with the Labaree boy who delivers milk. You certainly wouldn't want to move over to a ranch in the San Joachin, and wash milk pans for the rest of your life on a dairy farm!"

"I don't say I would," Dodo said, her face flushed, "but it wouldn't be so very different from what we are doing here, would it?"

Joyce regarded her with surprise and alarm.

"Yes, but Dodo, this is only for a while, with us!" Joyce protested. "We'll not stay here! If Lissy marries in June, and Paul and I step off in September, we'll—well, we'll be in very different places. We'll both be in Burlingame, or in San Francisco, anyway; this'll seem like a dream. But if you were wearing eighty-nine-cent bungalow aprons, and driving a muddy car into town for bridge prizes and jelly glasses—"

"I don't see anything so wrong about bridge prizes and jelly glasses!" Dodo said with an unwonted touch of haughtiness, as her sister, impressed by her own eloquence, stopped short. Joyce, stupefied, reflected upon the situation for a few days and then confided in her father.

"Dad, we couldn't have Dodo marry a yokel who talks about spavin and dances like a tractor!"

"Does he?" William Ballard asked, smiling absently, his eyes far away.

"He's terrible. That is, he's nice enough, and he talked to her about riding the range, and grapes, and the bureau, his grandmother brought from Woburn, Massachusetts. I mean, there's nothing wrong about him, but he's—well, impossible. If Lissy was married, or I was married, and he turned up as a brother-in-law—I mean, it simply wouldn't be funny!" Joyce persisted, distressed. "Mother would lose her mind!" she added, as a final argument.

"You can't tell, when it's a question of your children's marriages," William Ballard said slowly.

"But good heavens, Dad, you can tell when it's just a matter of propriety, and nobody else being around, and being lonely!"

"Marriage is almost always propriety, Joyce. We'll have to let Dodo manage herself."

"I think she ought to be sent away!" Joyce wanted to say impatiently. But it had recently been made obvious that nobody could go anywhere for a while anyway. For weeks Ben had been mad with impatience to be off, sometimes, talking of Alaska, sometimes of Tahiti or of New York, and a quite frank exposition of the family finances always constituted the subject of the bank; each quarter would see 300 more deposited; that was all the Ballards had. Lissy's wedding would cost something even if the outlay were confined to the "one plain suit and decent hat" of which Sally spoke so confidently. "Next year, they tell me, things may clear up a bit," William Ballard said cheerfully to his daughters. To Ben, Joyce once heard him speak more definitely.

"I've put it to you before this, Ben. If you stay here I expect you to help me, and make yourself useful to your mother and the girls. I'm not trying to hold you here. It's beginning to be my profound conviction that no man has any right to ask anything or suggest anything of the sort when he is 21, even if he happens to be his son. While you do stay here I'm glad to feed you and clothe you, of course. When you want to make some change, go ahead!"

One day Joyce and Dodo went with the three men up to clear the woods of the spring. In the back come buried and choked in the silt and the fallen leaves of winter and was runnig awry. Joyce had insisted on a "casual" lunch being carried. "You'd manage a picnic on the Statue of Liberty," Michael told her.

"Well, why not? I mean, if you went out there about noon, why shouldn't you bring a few sandwiches?" the girl demanded.

The job proved to be much longer and more complicated than they had anticipated, and it was with great satisfaction that she presently offered her luncheon to the group.

"That food hits the spot," Michael said.

"Well, what did I tell you?" Dodo, leaning toward a little fire, showed her sister a brown small hand for a second, withdrew it. The blood receded from Joyce's heart. On the third finger had been a band of plain gold.

She stared at Dodo, her mouth agape, all the strength gone from arms and legs. But Dodo was looking another way, and presently jumped up busily and began to clear away the signs of the simple meal. Joyce followed her into the wood, caught her in a firm grip, faced her about.

"Theodora Ballard!"

"What?" Dodo murmured, in a little voice with a giggle in it.

"What on earth did you have on your hand? Dodo, you haven't!"

"Yes, we were! Yesterday!" Dodo breathed triumphantly.

"You and Ch—! You weren't!"

IV—Around the World.

When Wiley Post and Will Rogers met their death in Alaska three years ago, millions of people felt deeply sorry about their loss. An airplane accident had taken the lives of two famous men, each doing worthwhile things in his own field.

A year later, Post joined Harold Gatty in a plan to fly around the world. The flight was made, and it set a new record. In eight days, 15 hours and 51 minutes, the two men circled the globe.

In 1933 Wiley Post made the same trip again—this time all by himself. Aboard the same airplane, the "Winnie Mae," he flew from New York to Koenigsberg, Germany, then on to Moscow.

From there he winged his way eastward, making several more stops in Russia. He stopped at Fairbanks, Alaska, then in Edmonton, Alberta.

From Edmonton, Post sped to New York, and landed in Floyd Bennett field after seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes of travel. He had covered a distance of 15,586 miles.

The record stood as the best until Howard Hughes made his great journey a short time ago. Wiley Post deserves to rank high in the history of aviation.
